Horner Points to Gains

"Gains made in behalf of the consumers of Pennsylvania during the past two years far exceed anything done to protect the consumer in any previous two-year period."

Jack B. Horner, addressing a Republican coffee klatch recently, said that consumer fraud has been costing the residents of the state an estimated $50 million annually. Horner is seeking re-election to the State Legislature from the 98th District.

"Unfortunately, the victims of this type of fraud are all too often the elderly, the poor and the uneducated. These people can be helped in ways other than mere handouts and we Republicans are doing more for them today than anyone has ever done before," he said.

The Elizabethtown lawmaker cited the recently enacted Goods and Services Installation Sales Act which affords protection to buyers using installment repayment plans.

"In addition to requiring the merchant to list the cost of installment buying, the exact amount of each installment and the number of payments, this legislation mandates that the service charge must not exceed 15 percent simple interest on the unpaid balance of any installment contract."

Horner said that the Department of Justice is countering deceptive advertising and dishonest selling practices through the newly created Bureau of Consumer Protection which has five branch offices in the state.

"The Republican - controlled legislature in Harrisburg also has passed a series of nine Administration - backed bills in the field of Insurance Law reform to provide further protection to the public. We now have the legal muscle to drive the gyps out of the state."

"These are just a few of the many ways we are getting rid of deceptive business practices. Republicans pledge to continue to build on this record of protecting the people of this state from the unscrupulous few who would try to cheat and defraud them," Horner added.

List Benefits of Fluorides

In addition to preventing tooth decay, fluorides may help prevent diseases of the gum tissues strengthen bones throughout the body, and reduce calcification of the arteries. This is what Dr. D. D. M. Hegsted of Boston told scientists attending the recent Western Hemisphere Nutrition Congress.

"In children alone we could save more than 100 million dollars the first year by using fluoridation," he said. "Fluoride can be expected to reduce dental cavities by 60 percent, at a cost of five to 15 cents per person a year compared to the huge cost of dental care."

Fluoride also increases the stability of bone. Studies show that people living in areas with high fluoride content in the water had stronger bones and much less back trouble, according to Dr. Hegsted, than people living in areas with low fluoride content in the water. It has been estimated that 14 million women in the U. S. suffer from osteoporosis (weakening of the bone density) and could be helped if treated with fluoride.

New data also indicate a lower incidence of calcification of the arteries of persons residing in high fluoride areas, suggesting it might have some value in preventing circulatory disease.

Experts at the meeting predicted that fluoride will be listed as an essential nutrient in the soon-to-be announced recommendations of the National Research Council.
