Rotarians Hear Jaycee Speaker

James Thorbahn, a former president of the Mount Joy Junior Chamber of Commerce and now executive vice-president of the Pennsylvania Jaycees, was the speaker Tuesday noon at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Mount Joy Rotary club.

His appearance was part of the local observance of National Jaycee week, which opens Sunday.

Thorbahn, a science teacher at Edward Hand school in Lancaster, gave Rotarians an enthusiastic briefing about the program—locally, state wide and nationally—of the Jaycee organization.

One of the prime reasons for the organization's being, he said, is to give young men an opportunity to learn to exercise the skills of leadership.

Any young man—between the ages of 21 and 36—is eligible to belong, he said.

One of the key words of the Jaycees, the speaker emphasized, is "service". He mentioned some of the state-wide projects and told about a Jaycee club of some 150 members which operates inside the state penitentiary at Lewistown.

The speaker was introduced by Pat Moran, president of the Mount Joy Jaycees.

Thorbahn and Moran were accompanied to the Rotary meeting by three other Jaycees—Andrew Reymer, Dennis Fackler and Ronald Hawthorne.

Six Companies At Barn Fire

Fire of undetermined origin, for the second time within less than two years, has visited the Warren Miller farm, southwest of Newtown.

Wednesday night, Jan. 8, it was a tobacco barn, containing the entire 1968 crop, which was destroyed at a loss estimated at $30,000. July 3, 1967, Miller's barn burned, at a loss estimated at $50,000.

Six fire companies responded to the alarm last week, including Mount Joy, Silver Spring, Florin, Marietta, Ironville and Maytown. A 1000-foot relay was laid from Chiques creek.

WASHINGTON REPORT

Congressman Edwin D. Eshleman

16th District—Pennsylvania

Recently I have received a number of requests for information about the home owners assistance now available through the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The Department has prepared handbooks to provide the necessary information, but these manuals are in rather short supply. Since the new program has generated some interest and probably will bring questions from many more people in the 16th District, I will devote this column to a brief explanation of what Congress intended the project to accomplish and where you might find additional materials and advice about the aid available.

Congress hoped that the program of home ownership assistance would provide a key element toward stimulating the construction of housing units during the next decade. The intent, however, was not only to provide more homes, but to enable particularly lower income families to buy houses and thereby experience the pride of possession that accompanies home ownership. In this way, the new program could become a vital influence in promoting personal responsibility and social stability.

The project should encourage maximum participation by private enterprise. It sets forth a national goal of building or rehabilitating enough decent housing to replace almost all substandard dwellings over the next ten years. And, the people occupying inadequate housing, including the elderly and the handicapped, may be enabled to live in better environments now outside their means.

Basically, assistance under the program is provided in the form of monthly payments to a person paying off a mortgage primarily to reduce interest costs. The amount of the subsidy will vary according to the income of the homeowner and the total amount of the mortgage payment at the market rate of interest. Family income and mortgage limits are established for eligibility in

Class-by-Mail At All-Time High

Even though the farm population continues to decline and more and more housewives work outside the home, correspondence courses in agriculture and home economics offered by Penn

State University for the past 76 years are now more popular today than ever before.

In fact they are so popular that people in all 67 counties in the Commonwealth currently are enrolled in courses in addition to students in the other states, the District of Columbia and 15 foreign countries. One magazine publishes one of the livestock courses in Spanish which is circulated in Central and South America.

"Courses in home-centered activities are the most popular," said Professor Walter L. Haldeman of the College of Agriculture Correspondence Course Office. "The subjects in most demand are flower arrangement, dog care and training, self-improvement, propagation of plants, hatmaking, home greenhouse, and making a dress."

pany and recently he had held the highly important post of Western Regional Sales manager.

He was the son of Mrs. Geneva Sharp Shaeffer and the late Leroy Shaeffer. His wife is the former Kathryn Haller.

Shaeffer was a veteran of World War II, having served in the European Theatre with the U. S. Army.

In addition to serving the local Legion Post as Commander, in 1949 he was District Commander and later participated in state Legion affairs but did not hold an office.

The body will be returned to Mount Joy.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of the Gerald R. Sheetz Funeral home.

locally. In some cases, firms providing rental units for low income families can also be considered for assistance.

Of course, to receive aid under this home ownership plan, you must first qualify under the provisions of the program. I would suggest that if you are at all interested, you carefully scan the Department of Housing and Urban Development's handbook if you meet the requirements. As I mentioned before, the handbooks are in short supply, but I will keep some available in my Lancaster office for your browsing at any time.

Detailed questions about the program or applications for assistance should be directed to the officials responsible for administering the project. The closest contact point for interested people in the 16th District is the FHA Insuring office, Room 900, 2 Penn Center Plaza, Philadelphia 19102.
