Some men should retire at 60. For some, it is a shame to turn them out to retirement at 70. Individuals are different. But, until some better measurement is found, the age rule stands.

Why the 21 year limit for voting?

Because, those who cast ballots need to be of an age of judgment that recognizes the magnitude of the privilege.

Eighteen year olds simply have not, generally speaking, the judgment. They have not lived long enough, seen enough of life and have not experienced enough of the nitty-gritty realities of life to fit them to cast a responsible ballot.

We are told how smart the present generation of youngsters has become—how much more they know than their fathers and mothers, at the same age.

True, youngsters are well schooled. They know more chemistry, biology, physics, anatomy, economics, physiology, aerology, botany and psychology. They have their heads full of knowledge.

But, it's a fact that their fathers and grandfathers at 18 probably were better based in judgment and better funded in reality than the 1969 youngster.

Grandfathers of the present generation of youngsters well may have been school teachers at age 18. They had been rubbed savagely into the economic dirt of survival. Which, is another way of saying that 18 now is too young for mature judgment needed to become a voter.

Actually, boys and girls become adult when they strike out on their own, become responsible for themselves and earn their own bread and butter.

A dependent child is not a mature child despite the fact he can quote learned theories, figure problems in higher math, understand the movements of the stars, the workings of a gasoline engine and talk knowledgeably about apogees and perigees. ens.

Judgment comes from experience, not knowledge!

Teenagers — 95 percent of them, we are told — are mighty fine people. They stay out of trouble, and are working and planning to be responsible citizens.

And, for that we are thankful.

But, until those boys and girls have reached a higher plateau of judgment, we believe that 21 is a better age at which to begin casting a ballot.

PP&L's CHUCK SAUDER can prove that electric heat is economical.

Call him

Chuck is an electric home heating specialist. He has worked with literally hundreds of customers in preparing estimates of the cost of replacing old-fashioned heating systems with electric heat. For most customers, the estimate was far less than they had expected. And, even more satisfying, they've found that operating costs matched the estimates. Add to this the greater convenience, comfort and cleanliness of flameless electric heat and you can understand why more and more people are switching to it.

Benefit from Chuck Sauder's experience and knowledge. Have him come out and estimate (no charge or obligation, of course) the cost of electrically heating your home. Call him at PP&L today.
