buses, etc. Too, the approaches to the bridge have been dangerous and in times of quick water rises, the stream has overflowed.

Many many times water has been over the roadway and traffic has been either temporarily halted or cars have been obliged to risk running through muddy, swirling waters.

On a brass plaque, embedded at the west end of the north ballast, is the information that the bridge was built in 1920 and that J. Miller Eshleman was the contractor. The bridge, it says, is safe for 20 tons and that the county commissioners were: S. W. Diller, J. R. Shirk and W. C. Beam.

Athletic Assn.

pointed out at the Tuesday night meeting that the immediate goal is to get baseball squared away for the youngsters of the community.

Already nearly 150 boys are involved and there are more and more each year. The need, it was pointed out, is almost unlimited.

Mentioned as possible future areas of activity are basketball and softball.

One of the first needs of the association, it was decided, is to launch a membership drive. Details are being worked out for action very shortly.

Another of the immediate needs, it was agreed, is the formation of by-laws to govern the organization. It was mentioned that a number of similar organizations already exist — Hempfield, Marietta, Ephrata, Elizabethtown, Columbia—and the officers are expecting to ask help from some of them in the structuring of necessary regulations.

Some of the other items discussed included; insurance, lighting, fences, concession stand.

The meeting was temporarily chaired by Barry Etsell.

Irish Trouble Touches Locally

Mount Joy, in an historic sort of way, is linked directly to a bitter piece of world news and the heritage of this community has a basis in the troubles being fought in blood. The news concerns the activities in Northern Ireland and Mount Joy, as many people know and understand, draws its name and a large part of its background from that very part of the world.

In Ireland, during the past few days, there has been bloodshed and death as the citizenry battle for ideals and ideas they have cherished for many years, actually centuries.

One of the beginning points of the most recent trouble surrounded the 280th observance of the siege of Londonderry by King James II for a period of nearly five months.

The siege was in 1689 and it brought hardship, pestilence and famine upon the citizens. It was not until two ships—the Mountjoy and the Dartmouth — arrived that the people were relieved and saved. Later, when people of that area came to the New World, they remembered their joy on the occasion of the lifting of the siege and named both a township and the community Mount Joy. These are historic facts researchers found thru the state library, principally from a book entitled, "A History of the Siege of Londonderry and Defense of Enniskillen in 1688."
