help men permanently by doing for them what they could and should do for themselves."

We, as Americans, are at the center of a battle. We are one of the prizes being fought for. Nearly all the world is engaged in this fight; every country has a stake in it. You probably do not realize it much of the time. You work on your job or in your house; you fill up your hours. Politics or the government is not so important as getting a living and enjoying life. But when the battle for the minds and bodies of men turns suddenly into a revolution, as it did in Russia, in Italy, and in Cuba, or into a war, as in Spain or China — then you may not have time to make a living.

Let us never forget, when the Pilgrim fathers landed on these shores, they set up a communist system. Out of their common product and storehouse they set up a system of rationing, though it came to less than a quarter of a pound of bread a day to each person. This system caused famine and misery, until capitalism and free enterprise were put in its place.

Freedom is the right of each man to approach God in his own way and by his own means. It is a man's right to possess his mind and conscience for himself. To those who put their trust in freedom, the State can have no sovereignty over the mind or soul.

The State must be the servant of man's reason, not the master. How shall freedom be defended? By arms when it is attacked by arms, by truth when it is attacked by those who lie, by democratic faith when it is attacked by Socialistic-Communist authoritarian dogma.

On what faith does the defense of freedom rest? On faith in man, faith in the fundamental decency of man, faith in the capacity of man to make his way by his own means to the truth which is true for him. Man must put forth the vital element, he must put forth effort.
