

Subject: PEOPLE!

BY NANCY NEWCOMER

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Longenecker returned last Wednesday after a delightful sixteen day Caribbean cruise. They sailed from New York on the ship, the S. S. Oceanic and visited seven islands including San Juan, Puerto Rico, Martinique, Barbados, Curacao, Jamaica, and Nassau. The weather was ideal and the food delicious.

Charles Reist, R. D. 2, has returned from a nine-day trip to Florida, where he flew for a visit with his mother, Mrs. Eugene Reist, in Sarasota.

He also spent some time in Miami, and while there met Heinz Stucki, a native of West Germany, who has been bicycling on a "Tour of the World" since 1960, thru 72 countries.

Charles spent two days with young Heinz, and enjoyed hearing of his many adventures — having typhoid fever in Persia, pneumonia in Egypt, being beaten unconscious by soldiers in Egypt, being locked up in Soviet Russia, being shot at by bandits in Algeria, riding thru flooded territory at night in Morocco, etc. In Ethiopia he was without water for two days; once in Algiers and again in Peru he lost all his money; on a trip to Expo 67 his diary, 1,000 selected slides and his photographic equipment were stolen.

The youth, who began his travels when he was twenty years old, is now 30, and does not plan to be "home" until 1972. His motto is: "Every blow that does not kill me hardens me."

Mr. Reist and Heinz traveled one day to Ft. Lauderdale, where they had dinner in a German restaurant, and partook of the specialty of the house, roast pig.

Heinz has traveled 43,750 miles by bicycle, and 93,750 miles by other transportation, such as ship, plane, car and train.

His average daily distance on his bicycle is 60 or 70 miles, but he set a record one day of 190 miles in 12 hours.

The expenses of his trip are covered by articles he writes for various newspapers, photographs he sells, talks he gives at service clubs or other places, and gifts from people he meets.

Students On Dean's List

Jean Musser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Musser, south Market Avenue, Mount Joy, has been named to the Dean's List at Millersville State College with a 3.5 average for the fall semester. Jean is a senior, student teaching this semester in Hambright elementary school in the Penn Manor school district.

Lack of financial support was considered the most difficult obstacle to overcome in all three regions of the Commonwealth. Only the southeastern region, the Delaware river basin, cited any obstacle more serious than financial support. This region called multiple political jurisdiction more vexing.

In solving domestic on-site disposal problems, community leaders felt generally that "inappropriate public attitudes" were the major hindrance. Assisting with the study were staff members from the Institute for Resources on Land and Water at Penn State.

Dr. Leadley believes the results indicate clearly the need for a forum to identify priorities for research funds, based upon observations of local, state, and federal decision-makers.

"Although airing such positions might lead to negative outcomes, the possibility of a compromise is great enough to justify holding such a forum," he affirms.

Two area students have been placed on the Dean's List at Findlay College, Findlay, Ohio, for the fall term.

They are: Miss Carol Ann Rohrer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell S. Rohrer, of Manheim R1.

A freshman, Miss Rohrer is majoring in elementary education and minoring in French. She is affiliated with the Student Education Association and the college choir.

Miss Rohrer was graduate in 1969 from Manheim Central high school, where she became a member of the National Honor Society. She is a member of the Landisville Church of God.

And—William Henry Reist, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reist of Mount Joy R1.

A freshman, Reist is majoring in religion and is a member of the college band.

He also is a 1969 graduate of Manheim Central high school, and a member of the Landisville Church of God.

Water is One of Decade's Big Problems

Dwindling water supplies will pose a major problem in Pennsylvania during the next 10 years, according to community leaders surveyed in 53 of the 67 counties. Among water resource problems, supply will even exceed the current major problem of pollution, reports S. M. Leadley, rural sociologist with the College of Agriculture at Penn State university.

The statewide study examined opinions of community leaders in the Allegheny, Susquehanna, and Delaware river basins. Listed as other major water resource problems in all three river basin areas were municipal waste disposal, domestic on-site disposal, industrial waste treatment, and acid mine drainage.

TO BE ON TIME

Children Should Learn

By James E. Van Horn

Suppose your child's report card shows he's been late for school several times. You say to yourself, "How could it happen when he has only a short distance to walk?"

Many young children have little sense of time. Perhaps your child has always depended on you to get him where he's going at the time he's supposed to be there. So, he's lost when he goes out the door by himself.

You can help him be on time. Talk with him about the reasons why adults as well as children have to watch the clock. Buses do not wait, school begins, television programs are on schedule — no matter if you're there or not. You have to be on time if you want to get in on something.

Another idea is to get him a clock with hands he can move. Show him on his clock the time he is to be in school and the time he is to be home after school. By looking at the school clock or the clock at home, he gets some idea of whether he is getting places on time.

Many children are exceptional learners — they absorb as much as they can about their environment. In fact, they absorb so much that it takes them what seems like hours to you to get to and from school. It's important not to stifle your child's curiosity, but it's also important for him to get where he is going. A little praise when he returns from school in a reasonable length of time may encourage him to do the same on his way to school.

Select Chairs for Comfort

By Doris W. Thomas

Chairs are made to sit on while you work or relax. They should support your body and give it an overall good feeling.

If the chairs in your home make you feel tired or restless stop circulation in your legs, and don't support your body, the chairs are not comfortable for you. Keep these things in mind when you are considering new chairs.

The comfort of a chair begins with its design. If a chair has been made without regard for human sizes, proportions, or contours, no amount of padding or covering can provide the comfort you need. Before you buy a chair, consider the way you expect to use it and who will use it most. Keep in mind his body measurements in relation to the chair.

Try chairs for size, just as you do a pair of shoes. Remember that most any chair is comfortable when you are tired. So go chair shopping when you are rested. A satisfactory chair will support your body in three places,— seat, back, and arms. It is important that the design of the chair is correct for your measurements.
