Over The Back Fence

THE TWO current problems with this year's corn crop indicate that we might be heading for additional obstacles when we grow corn on the same ground for a number of years. The leaf blights and the root worm seem to be on many farms and the condition may get worse. Growers are urged to evaluate all measures to prevent the infections next year so that corn will continue to be the major grain crop. At this time of the year winter barley is being planted and this small grain is the very best substitute for corn in most livestock and dairy rations. Some growers may want to increase the acreage of barley this fall due to the corn situation and the great need for more straw.

THE USE of lime is strongly recommended at this time of the year when small grain land is being prepared. On many grain fields either alfalfa or clover is to be seeded into the ground next spring or summer. Growers should give lime sufficient time to make the soil more alkaline; to apply it only a few weeks before the legumes are to be seeded is not recommended. As the small grain field is being worked this fall, the lime should be worked down into the top 6 to 8 inches of topsoil. This will allow several months for the lime to work before the legumes are seeded. A complete soil test will determine the amount of lime and fertilizer that is needed.

THE MONTH of September is a good time for the property owner to improve his landscape. Lime and fertilizer may be applied to the lawn and new seedings of grass may be made with good chances of success. Evergreen shrubs such as yews, junipers and Japanese holly may be planted before cold weather arrives. Shade trees such as oaks and maples should not be planted until they are dormant which would be late November or December. Attention to the lawn at this time of the year will help get a better turf for next year. Shrubs planted this fall and kept watered until the ground freezes will be off to a better start than to wait until next spring to transplant.

ALL DAIRYMEN are reminded that acorns are very hard on the milk flow of dairy and beef cows. Any pastures that have oak trees should not be used by the milking herd this fall. Some experiences have been very bad in which cows ate the acorns and the amount of milk was reduced more than half the former amount and the cow could not be brought back to normal production until the next lactation. Cows will nourish the acorns if they get started to eat them in spite of having good forage grasses in the area. Young stock may be allowed in the oak pasture with little danger of digestive trouble or toxicity from the acorns.

little thoughtfulness, a little attention from a number of people.

Just imagine what sunshine a shower of cards — even from people they do not know personally — would take into the sick room, into the home of an aged person, into the heart of an invalid and to that loved one's home.
