

All-American Dream

EDITORIALS ---

One of the principal fundamentals of the universe is that "there is nothing in life as certain as change."

And, to that axiom we add, "Except that when changes do come, most people are certain to be against them."

That is the changing world in which we live today.

Change is upon us — changes are being made and a lot of people are against them.

But, so has it been since the beginning! Within a few days, probably, Former Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton will issue his commission's report on "campus unrest." One of the ingredients of that message to the President will be the pointing out of a deep undercurrent of change.

The report will suggest a need for a more reasonable attitude toward student viewpoints.

What are those viewpoints? Scranton's commission, after much listening, will say there is an "emerging culture", primarily that of youth, though shared by the intelligentsia and some minority groups, which demands that the U. S. stand up and be counted on its idealism — the ideals which trace back to the Founding Fathers of the Republic.

The commission will ask for a more "reasonable attitude" toward this change and in a gentle way perhaps urge Nixon and his vice-president to simmer down their harshness against the student population.

Scranton's writers will point out that if there is a continued hard line taken toward student dissent, it will lead to further alienation and radicalizing among the young people.

What is being said is that there is a change in our midst — whether we like or not, whether we approve or not or whether we are going to accept it or not.

There are "uptight" elements in the national society and there is a drift toward a national crisis of extreme depth. This crisis as it appears on the campuses, the suggestion says, is a reflection of the depth as well as being part and parcel of it.

"There are in this country on both sides . . . trigger-prone persons," Scranton is quoted as pointing out.

Who among us says that he can not accept the change which comes?

As the days, months and years pass, it is more obvious that change already is here and that like it or not, bending to it already is here!

"The first amendment is explicit as to 'the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances' . . . Peaceably is a key word of . . . (this) quote; however, it is conveniently ignored by many persons who equate dissent with destruction . . . There is nothing in the first amendment which guarantees people the right to riot and plunder as means of dissent. Invariably, when incidents and altercations occur during public dissent, the trouble is started by unpeaceful participants who knowingly and willingly break the law."

—J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

WASHINGTON REPORT

Congressman Edwin D. Eshleman

16th District—Pennsylvania

A rare and important Joint Session of Congress recently was held to focus world attention on the plight of American prisoners of war in North Vietnam. The details of that meeting may have been lost among other fast-breaking international developments. But the significance of the session should be noted by Americans, our allies and our enemies. The members of the U. S. Senate and House of Representatives made it clear that despite our differences about Vietnam policy, we stand together in a protest about the treatment of our men held captive by the North Vietnamese.

to the hope for the return of a husband, a father, or a son, and yet two out of every three families seems certain to be doomed to disappointment. The best estimates we have show that approximately 500 of our missing soldiers are alive and in Communist hands. That means that as many as a thousand of those missing must be presumed dead. But which 500 or which thousand we don't know because the North Vietnamese are unwilling to make the most basic concession to decency and release the names of the men they hold.

The Communist attitude reflects their interest in the prisoners as political pawns rather than human beings. They are not willing to dis-

Colonel Frank Borman, the former astronaut, appeared before the joint session to discuss the POW issue. Colonel Borman is the President's Special Emissary on Prisoners of War in South east Asia. He said that his report was one of "American anguish and human tragedy."

Congress and the American people agree that the problem of our military men who are missing in action and presumed to be prisoners is tragic and painful. Despite the tremendous efforts put forth by our Government and the help given us by the International Red Cross and many interested countries, the Communists have refused to show any concern or compassion for the prisoners or their families. The most basic forms of cruelty are employed by the North Vietnamese in an effort to cause as much suffering as possible.

One of the saddest commentaries in this whole terrible situation is that so many people are left clinging

BURNING WASTE

An approved waste burner or cooking facility is defined in the Mount Joy Code of Ordinances as a steel drum in good condition with a top covering of wire mesh or metal with holes of not over one-quarter inch, to arrest sparks; a fire place or home-made burner with the same covering over the top or an approved commercial burner with the same covering over the top.
