up to her as its main protector, defender and food supply.

"A dog is a man's best friend," runs an old adage that is at least partly correct.

For a dog doesn't "chew out" its master, whether the latter be old Tom or a 6-year-old boy.

Instead, a dog always smiles, for when it wags its tail, that is the canine manner of grinning happily at its master.

You may be rejected of men and a drunken bum to the neighborhood around you, but your faithful dog will patiently wait at the tavern door to guide your staggering steps homeward.

Even if you are broke and can't feed him a crust of bread, he will stick by his master.

In fact, the dog has occupied such a splendid position of friend and ego-booster for unhappy folks, that it has been given the name of deity except spelled in reverse.

For "D-O-G" is "G-O-D" spelled backwards!

God is depicted as looking down in kindly fashion to us human beings and the dog looks up to us in somewhat similar manner!

You mothers may protest the dog hairs and inconvenience resulting from such a pet for your youngsters, but dogs are 4-legged psychiatrists who bolster the wounded ego of kiddies and relax their tensions far better than chemical tranquilizers!

A dog will thus bark gleefully and meet its young master at the front door, despite the poor report card which causes its daddy to bawl him out!
