PROTECTIVE HEADGEAR SAFER

A farmer should use protective headgear routinely when involved in certain types of agricultural jobs, say Extension Agricultural at Penn State.

These chores might be construction, demolition, or maintenance work, repairing machinery and vehicles, operating machinery in orchards, shutting in and out of buildings with low doors, felling or trimming trees, or carrying out electrical chores (but only with non-conductive types of hats).

WHEN YOU BUY CELERY

When you buy celery, Extension consumer specialists at Penn State university, say make sure it's crisp. It should also be glossy, have a light to medium green stalk with a solid, rigid feel. The leaflets should be fresh and mostly green. Store celery in a cold place as soon as you get it home. To refresh a slightly wilted stalk, put the butt end in water for a few minutes.

LAUNDRING TIPS

Fastening zippers and hooks and eyes before laundering your clothes may seem like an unnecessary, bothersome task. But Mrs. Ruth Ann Wilson, Extension clothing specialist at Penn State says this practice helps to avoid damage to other items in the washload.

It is the first rule in oratory that a man must appear such as he would persuade others to be; and that can be accomplished only by the force of his life. —Swift
