Timely Tips

but more and more homemakers are buying pastels, florals, and stripes. You need to think about personal preferences, cost, who will use them, and where they will be used and laundered. A wide variety in quality is available.

One thing the wise consumer needs to know is the difference between muslin and percale sheets and pillowcases. One difference is in thread count. Thread count is the number of yarns in one square inch of sheet. For example, if a sheet has a thread count of 180, it has 90 length wise threads per inch and 90 crosswise threads per inch.

Muslin

Muslin sheets are made in three types with 128 threads per square inch, 134 threads per square inch, and 140 threads per sq. inch. Yarns for muslin sheets and pillow-cases are made from carded cotton, and are coarse to the touch. The weave is looser than percale, but they are strong, long wearing, and the least expensive sheets and pillowcases on the market.

Percale

Percale sheets and pillowcases have high thread count, 180 to 200 threads per square inch. Yarns are made from fine combed cotton and the weave is close and even. They feel soft and smooth, are lightweight, easy to launder, and are priced slightly higher than muslin sheets and pillowcases.

No-Iron

In addition, to the cotton traditional muslin and percale sheets and pillowcases, you now find no-iron sheets on the market. Muslin and percale types are available, but instead of being of all-cotton construction, the cotton is blended with polyester. These no-iron sheets dry quickly when laundered, require no ironing and remain unwrinkled in use. They are slightly higher in price than all-cotton muslin or percale sheets.

Nylon-Tricot

Nylon tricot sheets are available, too. They are made wrinkle-free. The best quality of nylon in a knitted con-ty nylon sheets are priced struction. They feel soft and slightly less than durable smooth, are fast drying and press sheets and pillowcases.
