NEW BABY NEEDS FEW BUT COMFORTABLE WARDROBE

If you're expecting a new baby, keep in mind that he'll need few garments and accessories. But he does need clothes that are easy to launder, lightweight, and absorbent.

Whether your baby is asleep or awake, see that he is comfortable, reminds Mrs. Ruth Ann Wilson, Extension clothing specialist at Penn State. His clothing, something to wear or blanket, must be safe, too. Garments with neckline drawstrings can be dangerous. You'll want to see that every garment allows enough freedom of movement. Flat seams and easy-to-use fasteners are other features that you'll want in your baby's clothes. Fancy trimmings may be pretty but they can hinder baby's movements or make him uncomfortable.

Garments that are easy to put on and take off belong in a baby's wardrobe, according to Mrs. Wilson. This means plenty of room at neck openings. Your baby can be frightened when you pull a tight garment over his head. Garments that open flat rather than slide over the head are a wise choice. Another important feature to look for when buying baby clothes is washability.
