CARING FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Keep the instruction books that come with the gifts your family receives for Christmas. Whether you find garments, camera equipment, washing machines or small appliances under your Xmas tree this year, save the instruction tags or booklets when you unwrap the gifts.

Extension home management specialists at Pennsylvania State university say all those Christmas presents will give you far better service and longer wear if you follow the manufacturer's directions for their use and care.

If it's an appliance, you won't get the best operation unless you maintain it according to instructions, understand its special features, and use the most appropriate cleaning agents or accessories with it.

If it's a fabric, the manufacturer's instructions will tell you what its fiber content is and how you should launder or dry clean it. If it is a complex piece of electronic equipment, there are certain do's and don'ts to follow in its operation.

Manufacturers are concerned with your being satisfied with their products, and it is to their best interest and yours that you use them correctly.

For longer, more efficient, and more satisfactory use of your Christmas gifts, take good care of them. Your instruction books *will tell you how.

TASTY GIFTS

If you are on a limited budget, bake something good for Christmas giving. Extension foods and nutrition specialists at Penn State suggest baking miniature loaves of your favorite quick bread — banana, date, orange, or cranberry. Package each loaf on a small wooden cutting board cover with clear plastic wrap and tie it with a pretty ribbon.

WINTERIZE THE LAWN

Grass should go into the winter cut at normal height to avoid matting down and possible snow mold injury, reminds John C. Harper II, Extension turfgrass specialist at Penn State.
