the trend is "out of the kitchen and into the processing plant." Catherine Love, Extension consumer education specialist at Penn State, says some of this maid service we have come to expect includes: washing and packaged vegetables, ready-to-cook poultry, frozen ready-to-cook vegetables, ready-to-serve vegetables, cake and pudding mixes, and partly and completely prepared meals. While "mix and bake" and "heat and eat" foods offer convenience, they cost more than made from scratch items. Compare before you buy if you're trying to make the most of your food dollars. But remember you're saving time and energy with your dollars, so consider how much it's worth to you.

BUYING LIFE INSURANCE

Many people overlook possible economies when they buy life insurance. For example, explain Extension home management specialists at Penn State, some fail to take advantage of group insurance plans which are usually less costly than individual policies. Many pay premiums on a monthly or quarterly basis when careful budgeting would allow them to pay on annual basis and make a saving. And families who need a substantial amount of life insurance should investigate the discount that insurance companies often offer to people who buy a single policy having a high face value.

RUNS AND HOLES IN GIRLS TIGHTS CAN BE MENDED

If your young daughter's tights suffer from frequent runs and holes, you can mend them—if you are careful not to make more runs while doing it. Runs and holes in the tights come from broken threads in the knit, explains Extension clothing specialist at Penn State, Mrs. Ruth Ann Wilson.

To mend the holes or runs, turn the tights inside out, and put a light bulb or round smooth, hard object inside. This will help you see the hole better. Using nylon or polyester thread and a nee-die, go though each of the tiny loops you'll see around the edges of the run or hole. Pull the thread tight as you sew. And this should bring the loops together.

Trying to mend tights with a sewing machine may not be successful, as you are likely to lengthen the existing run, says Mrs. Wilson.

Any mend in tights will show some, but it will show less if you do it on the wrong side.

Tights are one item where a higher quality pair may give better wear. Usually, the heavier, textured tights don't develop holes and runs as quickly as the smooth, sheer ones. They are also easier to mend and do not show the mends as much. Examine the construction of tights before you buy them. Look for a strong kit, reinforced heel and toe, and size that's big enough, suggests Mrs. Wilson.

Poor health in an alibi more often than a fact.
