Water flowing from property finds its way into rivers or streams in one way or another. Soil eroded from land and carried by wind or water plays a major part in contributing to the 500 million tons of sediment found in our rivers, harbors, lakes and reservoirs each year. Removal of that sediment costs the taxpayers about $250 million a year. Trees, shrubs, grass, and other plants not only help to preserve our priceless and threatened water resources.

The lucky man is the one who forgets his bad luck.
