TURN OVER COMPOST

April is a good time to turn over the compost pile, reminds J. Robert Nuss, Extension ornamental horticulturist at the Penn State university. He suggests turning it by cutting off one end and shoveling it over a new pile. After another period of decay turn the pile once more. Compost should be thoroughly rotted before it is applied to a garden.

Thoughts lead to purpose, purposes go forth in action; actions form habits; habits decide character; and character fixes our destiny.

ELECTION BRAIN TEASERS

Here's an interesting historical memory quiz to try on the family or at a party. The answers appear at the end of the story, but no fair "peeking"!

1. Who were the Republican candidates for President and Vice President in 1964?
  2. Who was Adlai E. Stevenson's running mate in (a) 1952, (b) 1956?
  3. In what city was the 1968 Republican national convention held?
  4. In which election was the popular vote closer: (a) Kennedy vs. Nixon (1960) or (b) Nixon vs. Humphrey (1968)?
- As with football, politics seems to make quarterbacks of almost everyone. We each have our favorite candidate and play the game of who will win, why and by how many votes. After it's all over, we usually reflect on how the course of history might have been changed:
- if the Republicans and Tom Dewey had not been so over-confident and worked harder to win in 1948. (Harry Truman didn't have a chance, they said.)
  - if Richard Nixon had not debated John Kennedy in 1960.
  - if the war had not been an issue in 1964.
  - if the Democrats had not held their 1968 national convention in Chicago.
- That's what makes politics

so fascinating. It permits the luxury and fun of speculation.

Researchers have discovered that a well devised game can be the next best thing for recreating the excitement of actually "throwing the hat in the ring". One such game, developed by 3M, involves participants in many of the pitfalls and challenges of a real political contest. Realistically re-enacting the campaign events leading to a presidential election, the game is appropriately called, "Mr. President". Actual voting habits of the nation, based on statistics from past elections, are reflected as leaders are elected either by popular vote or electoral tallies. The researchers have found activities such as these help participants feel the frustrations and victories experienced by real candidates. Young people also gain a better understanding of how our political system operates.

- Just in case your memory is not as sharp as it once was, here are the answers to the quiz at the beginning:
1. Barry Goldwater and William E. Miller; 2. (a) John J. Sparkman, (b) Estes Kefauver; 3. Miami Beach;
  4. (a) Kennedy vs. Nixon by .2 of 1 per cent. (Nixon's margin over Humphrey was .7 of 1 per cent).
