ADEQUATE

Although the population is increasing and people are living closer to each other than ever before, more people are saying, "I have only one or two real friends, and very few acquaintances." If you wish to change this, you may have to overcome the feeling of inadequacy in yourself that causes you to seek out only those whom you feel understand you. Thus you are given comfort and support without having to meet challenges in your human relations. If you begin now to see yourself as a strongly adequate person, you will find more fulfilling relationships with others. Getting it done is difficult if the committee is the unfit, named by the unwilling, to do the unnecessary.
