The flag cannot be raised until this has been repaired. P.P. & L. Company will repair it as soon as they can. They were delayed because of the flood.

● SICO PARK

As of now, the park is closed and it is anyone's guess as to when it will be reopened to public use.

SICO workmen have made an effort to open a drainage path to clear the area of water and some preliminary salvage work has been done — including reclaiming picnic tables, some of which have been washed far down the stream and deposited on farm land.

SICO is attempting to make some kind of estimate of the damages, keeping in mind that the park, ultimately, will be restored. But, when is another matter. It will not be this week, probably not this month, maybe not even this season.

Use of the pavilion had been booked almost solidly every weekend for the rest of the season.

There have been many offers of volunteer help for the cleanup and other donated labor may be necessary as available manpower is juggled to fit the present situation.

Flood waters raged across the park and at one time were lapping at the rim of the basketball goal, located near the center of the developed area.

But, the extent of the damage was not visible until the muddy, swirling water receded.

The park is a disaster area. Shelter pavilions were swept away toilets were overturned and damaged; trees were uprooted; picnic tables were jumbled into chaotic piles, some chained together and others deposited across the creek on the mud flats.

The circular levee, around the park to protect it from ordinary high water, was breached in at least three places and badly damaged in many others. Water fountains were damaged. Some of the heavy concrete ended benches were moved and damaged. Some remaining pavilions were damaged on the roof by floating logs.

The baseball backstop is a wreck. Fireplaces and charcoal burners are badly damaged.

Concrete floors of some of the pavilions which were swept away are covered with caked and drying mud, gravel, sand.

The ground, in the low areas of the park remained soggy and spongy for days after the flood and in some places brown, stagnant and smelly water continued to stand.

Over the entire area which was water covered on June 22 there is debris which has floated down and the low areas have been left with a heavy deposit of soil, small rocks, etc.

About the only part of the park which was not damaged were shelters and tables on high ground near the entrance and the children's playground equipment, which also is located higher than most of the picnic facilities.

Even the parking lot was damaged. One small sink hole developed near the southeast corner of the macadam area.

The park actually is owned by the Donegal School district, placed in its hands by the late Clarence Schock.

Since the time of the gift, SICO — through the SICO Foundation — has spent thousands of dollars to improve and to maintain the property. Financing has been a book-keeping exchange — the money spent credited as a further gift to the school.

In other business Tuesday night, the Authority heard a report from its engineers setting out that the present sewer plant has been determined to have a capacity of 1 million gallons per day.

This figure was determined after an exhaustive study made recently. Exacting studies have determined that the plant presently is processing about 750,000 gallons per day.
