ADJUSTMENT

This word should not be confused with passivity or quiet repression of one's true feelings. Quite often the "well-adjusted" husband leaves home and is never heard from again, or the "well-adjusted" wife buries her disappointment and frustrations but very seldom expresses her true feelings. This is not to say that we can always express everything we feel, but complete suppression or seeking means of escape is not the answer. We have to make adjustments to life and living every day, but completely giving up the freedom to express our natural feelings is too high a price to pay for being "well-adjusted."

EQUALIZE

In the name of being responsible, many find themselves in an environmental trap. Almost anything we do in today's world brings pressures, but those who dwell on resentment and have a feeling of enslavement can always find responsible ways of equalizing the pressures and regaining a sense of liberty. Any person can find some things that he really likes to do and that are enjoyable. He can also find an inner sense of serenity in the face of circumstances that leave much to be desired. Such equalizers prevent you from ever being trapped.
