DISCIPLINE

A mother who had just punished her child for failing to do something he knew he ought to, was taken aback when the little boy turned his tearstained face to her and asked, "Mommie, how do you make yourself do the things you ought to do?" It is a good question, and without an easy answer. Without discipline, we drift along and often fail to complete some task that we would really like to complete. Perhaps that is our answer. Knowing the vital need for discipline is the first step in successful fulfillment.

GRATITUDE

There are many things in life for which to be grateful, but sometimes we forget to be grateful for work. Think of all the people you know who do not work. Don't you find many of them seem to be out of tune with life? In beautiful words Kahlil Gibran describes work in this way. "When you work, you are a flute through whose heart the whispering of the hours turns to music. In keeping yourself with labor you are in truth loving life."
