DYEING POLYESTER FABRIC

According to Extension clothing specialists at Pennsylvania State university, polyester fabrics can be dyed with a home dye product. But you should remember that the color will not be as deep as shown on the dye package. This is because polyester does not absorb, or take up the liquid dye as well as some other fabrics. Also, any oily spots or stains will not be covered up by a dye. In fact, a darker color may make the spots show up more.

COWS INVOLVED IN MANY ACCIDENTS

Cows are involved in 40% of accidents in farm buildings. Horses are involved 25 percent of the time. Three-fourths of the accidents with ladders on farms involve falls—often when trying to reach another foot in painting without moving the ladder, says Ralph Patterson, an engineer with the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

PERSONAL

Have you ever had anyone start to tell you something and then preface the statement with, "Now I don't want to be personal"? Personal is a good word. It speaks of knowing oneself as a person and being willing to become involved with other persons. Those who do a good job of what they are doing do so because the work has a personal meaning to them. They have a deep desire to pursue something to completeness. No sooner do they make a discovery than they have an urgent desire to share it with another person. The need is not to be less personal, but to dare to be more personal.

"There are no uninteresting things, there are only uninterested people." (G. K. Chesterton).

American Indian students in the 12th grade typically have a 2½ grade reading deficit. Less than half read at the 9th grade level.
