not unusual for a youngster to become chilled from over-exposure to low temperatures and damp clothing. "This is why parents, teachers and other persons responsible for small children should be alert and guard youngsters against developing such chills and the head colds and earaches that can follow.

"While there is no certain method for avoiding such illnesses, attention to the length of time a child is permitted outside during extremely cold weather and insistence upon the use of proper clothing can reduce chances of a youngster contracting such a malady," Smith explained.

"However, despite the most careful precautions, severe head colds and earaches may develop, and if this happens the attention of a medical doctor should be obtained. Above all, do not attempt to treat such illnesses with self-prescribed medications. The aftermath of such self-diagnosis & treatment also can be a hearing loss," he added.

Detroit is known as the "Automobile Capital of the World."

There have been few, if any times in our Nation's history when the flag has flown at half mast for 56 consecutive days. But with the death of two ex-Presidents in rapid succession, the flag symbolizes our long period of national mourning.

In a way, it is ironic that Truman and Johnson should pass away at so nearly the same time — a time when the office they held has come under frequent attack. The Presidency, itself, and not just the particular person holding the office, has become a center of controversy. It is said by many to have become too powerful and too dominant.

While there are many legitimate and even disturbing questions about the power of the modern Presidency. Truman and Johnson are prime examples that it is also an office that breeds diversity.

Both of these men had some remarkably similar qualities. They were both dominating personalities who acted without hesitation when convinced their course of action was right. They were both men with massive plans for social change at home that became partially lost amidst the crisis that arose in foreign lands. They were both men who found the final months of their terms dominated by an increasingly unpopular war.

But for all the similarities, the distinguishing characteristics between the Presidencies of Truman and Johnson hinge on their differences. They were men faced with similar dreams and similar circumstances who handled them in different ways.

Perhaps the chief differences can be summed up with a glance at the slogans that became associated with each man. Truman's decisions were very much a part of his philosophy that "The Buck Stops Here," while Johnson's decisions reflected his call on the American people to "Come Let Us Reason Together."

President Johnson's term was marked by his attempts to reach a national consensus on controversial issues. He operated like the master legislator that he was to try to reach compromises that would make everyone happy.

President Truman, on the other hand, saw controversial issues as matters demanding a firm decision. He was, above all, administrator who cared little whether a decision was popular, but was determined that a decision would be made.

This is not to say that one man's way of running the Executive Branch was better than the other's way. Obviously, I, for one, disagreed with many of the decisions and directions of both men at times they were being made.

But, it is encouraging to note that for all of its power and isolation, the Presidency is as different as the men who hold it. And, that's one of the chief things which distinguishes it from the monarchies that you often hear it compared to today. Not only do American people still have a say in who will serve in their most powerful office, but they still can be assured that the person selected will bring unique qualifications and permanent changes to that office. Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson did.

LOVE

Love and life are like close friends who walk hand in hand. To try to live without learning how to give and take love is like trying to push a loaded cart that has no wheels. Whoever first said "It's love that makes the world go 'round'" did more than coin a phrase. He stated a fact of life. We are not necessarily born with the ability to love well. It must be learned. To give love that is a mixture of understanding, caring, patience, friendliness, and compassion is to open the way for the same kind of love to come our way!

CHEROKEE 'STRIP'

The Cherokee "Strip" of Oklahoma was thrown open to the public for free settlement on Sept. 16, 1893.

A thought for the day: American statesman Benjamin Franklin said, "There never was a good war or a bad peace."

EARACHES, HEAD COLDS CAN LEAD TO HEARING LOSSES

"The severe head colds and earaches many children contract during the winter months should not be taken lightly, as they can lead to serious and even permanently handicapping hearing losses." This is the warning issued by David Smith, director of the Beltone Crusade for Hearing

Conservation.

The crusade is sponsored by Chicago-based Beltone Electronics Corporation, world leader in hearing aids and electronic hearing test instruments. It is designed to make the public aware of the need to guard against potential hearing losses.

Smith pointed out that because most small children enjoy playing in the snow, it is
