Put the lid on heating costs!

Winter's closing in . . . why not put the lid on heating costs this year? The lid, in this case, is insulation. And simply adding it to your attic adds up to significant savings in most every instance.

For example, let's say your attic floor is presently uninsulated and measures 1,000 square feet. If you add insulation 6 inches thick, you'll save about $113 worth of heating fuel each and every year. What's more, it's a job you can do yourself at a one-time cost of about $160.

Even if your attic is insulated, bringing it up to the recommended thickness of at least 6 inches is an investment that can quickly pay for itself.

Any way you slice it, a well insulated home is a home that delivers extra savings and comfort year after year . . . even in summer if you air condition. You'll be doing your bit for "conservation," too, because you'll be helping conserve our nation's energy resources.

So, put the lid on home heating costs now. And, while you're at it, check into storm windows and weatherstripping, too.

"Electricity is our product . . . conserving energy resources is our concern"
