

Bill Brown makes things

by Jean Adrian

William "Bill" Brown of 48 East Front Street, Marietta is a very talented man in the eyes of his comrades.

His skill is known to his associates at U. S. Aluminum, where he works.

Bill uses his skills to make furniture. He strives toward simplicity and sturdy work. He takes a lot of time and pride in his work to make it to perfection.

The table and benches in his home have gone through the Flood of '72, and are still in excellent shape. Among his pieces of work are a Butter Churn Coffee Table and a Wagon Seat Coffee Table, which are used in his home.

For the past years he has made and sold some of his products.

He has a very vivid workshop in the basement of his home. It is very inclusive and he takes a lot of pride in it. It includes a large number of tools and saws, which he uses skillfully.

He makes everything from gun cabinets to cradles. His work shows the real grain of the wood, and brings out its natural beauty.

He recently gave his daughter a beautifully constructed Hope Chest, which she takes great pride in.

He is now working on a project for an area Bicentennial organization.

You wouldn't be surprised to hear him hard at work if you pass by his house.
