

Safety tips for kids flying kites

With the thermometer reaching early gains, Children's thoughts turn to kites and planes.

They bring as much fun as there can be, But they must be flown in perfect safety.

Pennsylvania Power & Light Company reminds all children, and parents too, of the basic rules when using flying toys:

- Always fly kites and airplanes in open fields away from electric wires and auto traffic.
- Never fly a kite or plane on rainy days.
- Never use a flying toy containing metal or kite string made of wire.
- Special care should be taken to see that model airplanes which use wire control leads are flown far from any electric lines.
- Be sure your kite string is dry.
- Keep away from fallen wires.
- Never fly your kite or airplane near TV or radio antennas.
- If your kite or model plane gets caught in electric lines or atop a power pole, don't pull on the string or try to climb the pole in effort to retrieve it.

"Kite and model airplane flying can be fun if it's done safely and these few simple rules are followed," said Arch G. Kinsely, PP&L's Community Affairs manager. "I hope that all parents take a few minutes to tell their children of the danger in flying kites and model airplanes in the wrong places or in bad weather."

Big Brothers still needed

Several weeks ago the Bulletin published an article about the need for Big Brothers. We have been informed that some men have volunteered to be Big Brothers as a result of reading that article.

More Big Brothers are needed, however, to provide a stable father figure for fatherless boys who need an

Columbia Hospital wins accreditation

Columbia Hospital was accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals according to a joint statement issued by J. Edw. Charles, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Russell Stepanchak, Hospital President, and Dr. Robert M. Lombard, Medical Staff President.

On the basis of an in-depth on-site survey made by field representatives of the Joint Commission's Hospital Accreditation Program, Columbia Hospital was awarded the full two year maximum accreditation. Accreditation indicates that this facility has met or exceeded the stringent standards set forth by the JCAH in quest of optimal achievable goals of excellence for hospitals.

Columbia Hospital's Board Chairman, J. Edw. Charles stated that, "This achievement was truly the result of a joint effort on the part of our hospital personnel, Medical Staff, the Board and the Auxiliary. Our hospital family is to be commended for maintaining standards deserving of accreditation."

Dr. Lombard added that, "We have always strived for a high degree of excellence. Accreditation by the JCAH is due recognition of these efforts."

Columbia Hospital is one of approximately 5,300 general hospitals throughout the United States that have earned this recognition.
