53 conquers Appalachians

by an Observer.

6:00 A.M. on Sat., June 14th, found 13 bright-eyed, bushy-tailed scouts, 1 nervous scoutmaster, and 4 fathers (drivers) whose Sat. sleep was interrupted heading out of Maytown to conquer The Appalachian Trail.

Upon arriving at the drop-off point, approx. 10 minutes from Pine Grove Furnace State Park, the food car went to its destination.

Interesting observations were made: Ideal pack weight is supposed to be 1/5 of body weight, none were under weight. Hiking sticks are a must!!!!

Zuchie kept repeating himself 15 times, sneakers are a no-no, streaking was suggested, and so was fishing rods - but they were so hard to pack, Mert kept the boys in line.

Finally, the trail! The beauty of the mountains and the trail were soon realized also the weight of the packs! One scout was even willing to pay to have his pack carried!

There were visions of copper-heads, rattlers, and other wildlife, but scoutmaster Charlie and helper Mick, kept them protected. Finally, their destination was reached.

The lake was beautiful but the fishing terrible. After a delicious supper of homemade pot-pie, made by Charlie, highlighted with a cake made at the campfire using a reflector oven by Denny, another suprise. "GIRL SCOUTS."

After introductions, there were fascinating games like capture the flag, hide-go-seek, etc.

The evening was captioned with stories, songs, and skits around the camp fire. After usual problems of arousing in the A.M., the boys enjoyed fishing, swimming, etc.

Drivers arrived and the trip home was highlighted by a stop at the Golden Arches. All were relaxed, tired, but full of stories. This is what fun and education for boys is all about. Every boy has this opportunity but too many are content to sit at home; watch TV., or sit on the square and complain.

Ben Tracy

Tracy recounts travels

by Hazel Baker

Ben Tracy has done considerable travelling in his lifetime. Not only did he visit every state in the union (except Hawaii) before he was thirteen years old, but he revisited each state in later life, to look for familiar landmarks and changes.

Tracy, of 1127 Walbank Road, Lancaster, was a former employee of the Mount Joy Bulletin for nine years as a printer. Learning his trade in York, our subject worked as an apprentice in 1915 and received 75 cents for 72 hours work, however, he resigned after that salary was received. He was in Fort Sam Houston during World War I attending officers training when he returned to his trade at the York Maple Press then Lancaster Press and so he came to the Bulletin.

In the interview when asked what he thinks of the offset printing, Ben replied, "Offset is good but some features can't duplicate letter press while the opposite is also true."

Sue Robinson, receives M.A.

Susan Hostetter Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Hostetter, 207 Park Ave., Mount Joy, has received a master of arts degree in elementary education from Adams State College, Alamosa, Colo. She is also a graduate of Donegal High School and Millersville State College.

Jay W. Robinson, Mrs. Robinson's husband, has received bachelor of arts degree in industrial arts from Adams State.

Ben married the former Miriam Snyder of Lancaster and became the father of four, grandfather of four, great-grandfather of seven, and an interesting person to know. His son Jack Tracy is a candidate for Lancaster County Commissioner.

Born in 1901, Tracy lost his father in 1913. That was when Ben's mother returned to York to raise his brothers and sisters.

Ben's father was a tailor by trade. He would set up shops, and the family would follow him to its new home.

Ben remembers seeing Halley's comet in 1916, and travelling through the west by horse and wagon train.

Ben Tracy has several hobbies, among them are: carpentry, where he specializes in small objects or a china closet or two, and hooking pillow tops. He has played semi-pro football, with the Girard A Club of York, Baseball, Soccer, and still participates in some tennis matches
