Farm Diner rooster wrecked; reward for info. about vandals

That well-known local landmark, the rooster which has perched above the Lancaster County Farm Diner between Mount Joy and Elizabethtown for the past 14 years, was pulled down from its lofty outlook by someone very early last Sunday morning.

Whoever pulled the rooster down and then destroyed it, also in the process bent over to the ground the two steel beams that supported it.

The head of the 7-foot high and 5-foot wide fiberglass chanticleer was found near the diner. The legs were across Route 230 at Tropical Treat. And the bulky body was at Mount Calvary Church in Elizabethtown, when early morning worshippers arrived.

Jim Mummau, proprietor of the Farm Diner, is offering $500 reward for information leading to the arrest of the destroyers of the rooster.

Information should be phoned to the State Police (1-299-0441), not to the Diner.

Mummau will try to put the rooster back together again.

Damage is estimated at $2000.

"The pumpkins are coming!" at Riverview

by Miss Aurick

The pumpkins are coming! The pumpkins are coming! And they're just in time for Halloween. But these are not just ordinary pumpkins.

Miss Aurick's fifth grade students at Riverview Elementary School took part in a pumpkin decorating contest. The participants used construction paper to transform their pumpkins in to characters pertinent to the Revolution and the early years of our country. Although it is difficult to get a pumpkin to look like a real character from history, the students achieved a note of authenticity through details of hair and costuming. All the work was done in class in the students' spare time. Judging the contest were Miss Heisey, art teacher, and Mr. Lawrence, principal.

First place winner is Richard Zink. Second place went to Peter Bashore. Stacy Nagle won the third place ribbon.

The winning pumpkins are a minuteman, Thomas Jefferson, and Patrick Henry. The pumpkins are on display in the lobby.
