

Wrestling practice is hard work.

Indianettes keep the wrestlers cheered up

Training to be a wrestler is hard, grueling work. However, the wrestlers at DHS have something to look forward to when they finish struggling with weights.

They can report how many pounds they lifted to a friendly Indianette.

There are two dozen Indianettes. They keep records, cut up oranges and make Gator-ade, and keep the wrestlers cheered up.

The captains of the Indianettes are Bonnie Baker and Brenda Mackison.

Wrestling coach Eugene Funk says, "They're great. I just tell them what we need done, and they take care of it."
