Bob Kline's pigeons

Their homing instincts would still guide them to the old location.

When the birds are in training, they are allowed to fly for one hour in the morning and one hour in the evening.

When Bob lowers a flag on the coop, the birds fly into the coop to eat. A one-way door prevents them from leaving again.

The local opposition to his hobby caught Bob by surprise.

"We have fliers with pigeons in Lancaster, Harrisburg, York, Hanover, Millersville, and Red Lion," he says.

"I know of clubs in Reading, Philadelphia, and Chicago - almost anyplace you'd care to go.

"So why this suddenly developed here is beyond me."

East Donegal adopts zoning

East Donegal Township's new Municipal Building was on display last Sunday when the supervisors held an Open House.

Visitors were impressed and pleased by the spacious meeting rooms and housing for equipment.

At their regular monthly meeting, last Thursday night, the supervisors, Lloyd Fuhrman, Abram Nolt, and James Johnstin, adopted the new zoning law, which implements the comprehensive plan for the township. The plan has won praise for its provisions permitting gradual housing, commercial, and industrial development near the borough of Marietta and Mount Joy—but preserving the interior of the township for agricultural use.

The supervisors also granted an extension in time for the building of the Country Village (Endslow) Development near Maytown.

Don Kraybill

Donald B. Kraybill, an assistant professor of sociology at Elizabethtown College, has completed requirements for a Ph.D. in sociology at Temple University.

Kraybill, who joined the Elizabethtown faculty in 1971, holds a B.A. from Eastern Mennonite College and a M.A. from Temple, both in sociology.

His dissertation is an assessment of the influence of parents, friends, and teachers on value transmission in the ethnic high school, using data collected at the Lancaster Mennonite High School.

Kraybill was one of two members of the faculty to receive institutional research grants last summer and his dealt with the sociological and anthropological impact of schools operated by Mennonites in the United States and Canada.

Born and raised in the Mount Joy Area, Kraybill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer G. Kraybill, Elverston R.D.
