Man, says Victor Hugo, "was the conundrum of the eighteenth century; woman is the conundrum of the nineteenth century."

The captain of a privateer, who had been in an engagement, wrote to his owners that he had received but slight damage, having only one of his hands wounded in the nose.

An honest dame, standing beside the corpse of her deceased husband, bewailing in piteous tones his untimely departure, observed, "It's a pity he's dead for his teeth are as good as ever they were."

"Tommy, do you know that your Uncle Robert has found a little boy-baby on his door-step, and is going to adopt him?" "Yes mamma; and he'll be Uncle Bob's step-son, won't he?"

Mother: "Now, Gerty, be a good girl, and give Aunt Julia a kiss, and say good-night." Gerty: "No, no? If I kiss her, she'll box my ears like she did papa's last night."

The most laconic will on record is that of a man who died in 1872. It ran thus: "I have nothing; I owe a great deal—the rest I give to the poor."

"Pa," inquired an up town boy, "what is a sage?" "A sage, my son," replied the father, gloomily, "a sage is a man who never marries."

How to ask for a Penny. It has often been said that the members of the Society of Friends are possessed from their youth of more than an ordinary share of acuteness.

Snooks' mother and old Mrs. Stubbs were talking about little babies. "Why," said Mrs. Snooks, "when I was a baby they put me in a quart pot, and then put the lid on."

"And did you live?" was the astonished inquiry of Mrs. Stubbs. "They tell me I did, and grew nicely," was the astonishing reply.

"Well, did you ever?" and Mrs. Stubbs fell to knitting like one possessed.

An Englishman was accosted thus:—"What would you take to stand all night in the tower of St. Paul's?" "A beefsteak and a pint of beer," was the frank reply.

The next one thus accosted was a Scotsman. Says Sandy, "what'll ye gie?" Lastly came along Patrick, and when asked what he would take to stand all night in the tower of St. Paul's, he wittily answered, "An' sure an' I'd be apt to take a bad cowlid."

She was found of conundrums, and when she learned that mulier was latin for women, she thought she had a good one. So she asked her husband, what was the difference between herself and a mule. And as he had been married several years, he was too thoughtful to trouble her by guessing, but kindly remarked that he had never been able to see any.

"Was Mr. Chisselm a very popular man when he lived in your town?" inquired a busybody of a friend. "I should think he was," replied the gentleman, "as many persons endeavored to prevent his leaving; and several of them, including the sheriff's deputy, followed him some distance."

"Speaking of shaving," said a pretty girl to an obdurate old bachelor, "I should think that a pair of handsome eyes would be the best mirror to shave by."

"Yes, many a poor fellow has been shaved by them," the wretch replied.

A physician ordered one of his patients to drink seidlitz waters. The man made a wry face at the suggestion. "It is only the first glass that is unpleasant," said the doctor. "Very well, then," answered the man, "I'll only drink the second."
