A Recommendation. Old SI was asked by one of our merchants: 'SI, do you know a darkey by the name of Davis?' 'Sicero Davis, wid de red eye dab got burn'd in de powder 'splotion?'

The gentleman named Davis was not engaged.—Atlanta Herald. A gentleman, residing in a neat, modest cottage in the suburbs, caught a tramp prowling about his back yard, evidently trying to steal something.

The wife of an Irish gentleman being suddenly taken ill, the husband ordered a servant to get a horse ready to go for the doctor. By the time, however, that the horse was ready, and the note to the doctor written, the lady had recovered; on which he added the following postscript and sent the servant off.

A young man who left on a far Western expedition was bidding his friends good-bye at the depot, when a young girl cried out: 'Bring me the scalp of a modoc, won't you?' The young man, feeling a little hurt at her indifference to his departure, and the dangers he was about to encounter, sadly replied: 'No, Emma; you should not look for more hair until you have paid for that you now wear.'

Mrs. Lirriper: I'm appy to say things is a-lookin' up agen. My 'artiest gentleman 'as bin an got hiffell in love. Mrs. Todgers: Lord! Well, I s'spose I'm unfortun'ate; but mine's the 'ungriest lot you ever see, and I never 'as the luck to get domestic 'flictions among 'em as'll take away their appetites.

It was a country member who, falling asleep during a session of the 'House,' awoke just as an appropriation was to be made, and asked his neighbor what the object was. 'Bridges and draws,' was the reply, and the drowsy one stood up, and apologizing for inattention, asked nervously, 'How much was to be spent for breeches and drawers?'

The son of a poor but honest parents lugged up a basket of potatoes from the cellar the other evening, to set them by the stove to keep from freezing. It was a hard job, but being a philosopher he extracted comfort from it. He said: 'I'm glad pa is a poor man, if he was rich he'd have laid in his potatoes by the barrel instead of by the peck.'

A Bridget, evidently new to the mysteries of marketing, seeing a pet owl in front of a poultryer's stand in Washington Market, said to its owner: 'What was ye be askin' for that broad-faced goose?' 'Gooose? that's an owl,' was the contemptuous reply. 'Owd it is, you're sayin'? Sure it's meself that can bile the bird till it's tender!'

A facetious physician, an old bachelor, said the other day to a single lady: 'How can you with a clear conscience answer St. Peter when you shall reach heaven's gate, for your heartlessness in refusing so many marriage offers?' The lady archly replied, 'I shall tell the Apostle that Dr. — did not ask me.'

Do you really believe, Mr. Podkins, that anybody could make a head from butter?' asked the landlady. 'Well, yes, ma'am, I should think they might,' said Podkins, as he pushed back his individual butter plate, 'somebody has got as far as the hair with this.'
