By the great fire in St. John, more than 15,000 people are homeless.

The swill milk dealers in New York are coming to grief as the authorities are making a vigorous war upon them.

PEACHES are coming forward freely from Georgia. Several car loads from the southwest were shipped to northern and western cities last week.

THE INDIANS in Oregon and Idaho, are murdering settlers and miners, and the army is promised some vigorous work.

Ten Mollies Hung.

On Thursday last four of the Mollies were hung at Mauch Chunk, and six at Pottsville. At the former place the whole four were hung one at a time, and at the latter place they were hung in couples. Everything passed off quietly. Another man was hung on the same day at Wilkesbarre, making eleven executions in one day.

A Silk Strike—Pugnacious Women.

There was great excitement among the silk factory hands at Patterson, New Jersey, Wednesday. Five or six hundred of them are on a strike. The Hamilton mill has shut down, and several mills are without hands. At a meeting of the strikers in Military Hall that day, Gustave Heinrichs favored returning to work. The women attacked him and tore his coat. One woman threw salt and pepper in his eyes. He drew an empty revolver, but was chased out of the hall and pursued half a mile, hundreds of persons joining in the chase, it having been reported that he had shot a woman. He was captured, taken before Justice Hudson, and discharged. He made a complaint against the woman who assaulted him with salt and pepper, and she was arrested and held to bail in $500. The operatives are determined to stand firm and so are the employees.

A Sensible Judge.

Judge Rhone, of Luzerne county, has called for the vouchers for the items termed funeral expenses in a recent case heard in the orphans' court. The amount of the decedent's personal estate was $581.82, while the expenses of burial were returned by the administrator at $139.75. On the subject of extravagant funerals Judge Rhone says: "It is not necessary to have a pompous procession in great length, in which figure conspicuously waving plumes—the prancing livery steed, harnessed to finely upholstered vehicles—and a glistening silver plated casket in which is placed the cold clay, clothed with raiment as costly as the richest he wore when living. Neither is a pile of carved marble with poetic inscriptions set over the tomb in a conspicuous corner lot in the city of the dead, necessary for a Christian burial.—Have the terms grave, coffin and shroud, been forgotten by everybody? Such parades as are called 'fine funerals' may gratify the vanity of the living, but no respect for the dead demands them, and where a decedent's estate is limited and his debts are not paid or where he leaves a family of helpless children, the expenses of such burials will not be allowed out of his estate. Those who contract for and enjoy such luxuries must pay for them themselves."

A Terrible Fire.

A dispatch received late on Wednesday night last says that a terribly destructive fire is now raging in St. John, New Brunswick. A telegram received early on Thursday morning states that all the public buildings, three principal hotels and all newspaper offices are burned. About three-fourths of the city is destroyed. The fire is still raging, and is beyond control.

The Western Union Telegraph office only saved their instruments and books. Several schooners and larger vessels were burnt to the water's edge. Rafts laden with goods and household wares readily caught the flames and were consumed.

The fierce wind drove the flames to the south and east and destroyed everything till they reached the water's edge. Five men and two infants are now known to have lost their lives and many are missing. The loss is estimated at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and the insurance will not, it is thought, exceed $6,000,000. Thousands of people wander the streets, homeless and in despair. The destruction of provisions of all kind seems to point to famine, and relief must come in speedily or many must perish from want. Few saved even their clothes. The fire is still raging, and no hope is entertained of extinguishing it until it has exhausted itself for want of material to keep it alive. The wind has died down but the fire still burns fiercely. The gas-works are destroyed and the remainder of the city is in darkness. The area burned is nearly two hundred acres.

Where the Turks will get Money—An Immense Amount of Money Lying Idle.

Mr. Delaplaine, the Charge d'Affaires of the United States at Vienna, furnishes the Department of State at Washington the following interesting information concerning a certain remarkable war resource of Turkey, the so-called "Treasure of Islam." The Cheik ul Islam has recently sent a delegation of doctors of the law to the Cherif of Mecca, a direct descendant of the prophet, for the purpose of demanding funds in defence of the Islam faith. It is customary on these solemn occasions for the Cherif to assemble the college of the elders, charged with the guard of the prophet's tomb, which will decide upon the appropriate sum to be furnished to the Sultan from the Treasury of Islam, in order to aid him in the war against Russia. This treasure is formed from those annual offerings of the pilgrims which are accumulated in the Kasbah of Mecca. These sepulchres which serve as offertory chests, are placed within the Court of the Mosque. Each pilgrim daily casts into one of these a coin as an offering, which constitutes the alms prescribed by the Koran as one of the elements of the merit of the pilgrimage, which every Mussulman should make at least once in his life-time to the tomb of the prophet. Accordingly every year about one hundred thousand pilgrims go to Mecca, who sojourn there a month, and consequently a sum of at least three millions of francs is annually received in these offertory chests. Every pilgrim deposits, in fact an offering, varying in amount, according to his means, but which on the average may be estimated as equivalent to five francs at least for every day, considering that there are rich Mussulmen, whose offerings attain even the amount of 100,000 francs during their pilgrimage. It results thereby that the Cheuf of Mecca receives in the average the value of 15,000,000 francs in annual offerings. One of the offertory chests was opened during the period of the Russo-Turkish war in 1868. Several large sums were withdrawn, but it was afterwards again closed. A second chest was opened in 1824, during the Crimean war, but the third has not been opened since 1415, during a period of 462 years. Inasmuch as the annual concourse of pilgrims has rarely fallen below one hundred thousand, and it is conjectured that, with most liberal allowances, the accumulation of money in the last named offertory chest cannot be less than 250,000,000 francs, and it is fully believed that the total amount of the treasure of Islam will exceed 600,000,000 francs, and may even attain a much higher sum.

Death Caused by Boys.

TREMONT, Pa., June 18.—After quitting time this evening at the Colkett colliery while a boy named George Derr, about eighteen years of age, was riding a mule down to the stable some boys ran out of the woods waving their hats.—The mule got frightened at this procedure and threw the boy. His foot caught in the trace and he was dragged to the stable, a distance of about a half mile. The boy died about twenty minutes afterwards.

Indians Run Away with Live Stock.

DEADWOOD, D. T., June 18.—On Friday last a small party of Indians made a dash upon a mountain ranch, nine miles from this city, and succeeded in running off considerable live stock. A party of forty miners bound for the Big Horn from this point were fired upon by Indians when about sixty miles out. One of the miners was slightly wounded.

Robbed and Deserted.

Frank Whittemore, a painter, met Miss Alice Carter, a wealthy young heiress, in New York a year ago, and they became betrothed. They eloped and went to live in West Hoboken. Several weeks ago Mrs. Whittemore gave birth to a child, and the father of the young wife relented, and sent a check for $1,000 to his daughter to fit up her household. On Monday a week young Whittemore procured the money on the check and quit home. The forsaken wife told the story of her husband's abandonment to her father, and he went to Hoboken. On Tuesday she packed up her furniture and started for New York. At the Hoboken ferry Dr. Talson, whom Mr. Whittemore owed a bill of $20, had Constable Francis Levy on the furniture, and it was stopped. The father and daughter were taken to the police station, and Mr. Carter was forced to pay the money.

A Brave Girl Shoots a Tramp.

A murderous tramp at Great Falls, N. H., met more than his match the other evening in the 20 years old servant girl of D. B. Dennison. Tramp entered the house while the family were absent, and ordered the girl to deliver the money and other valuables on pain of death.—She begged for her life and offered to go up stairs and get the money. This he permitted, but she procured Mr. Dennison's revolver instead, and when her visitor showed no inclination to obey her commands to leave the house she fired, and the ruffian fell. The other tramps immediately appeared and carried off their groaning comrade, and no trace of them has yet been found.

Miscellaneous News Items.

Father Fitzbarris, a priest, was stabbed in his arm at the front door of his residence in New York, on Monday night, by James Brennan, supposed to be insane.

A train of cars on a Florida railroad passed a man on horseback, and there was a great hurrahing among the passengers until they discovered that the horse was tied to the fence.

The hands employed at Light's rolling mill at Lebanon, struck on Monday, on account of their employers proposing a reduction of wages, and the works are now idle.

By the laws of Florida no man who has lost an arm or a leg, no matter how or when, or from what cause, can be taxed for any business he may enter into, always excepting the liquor business.

One night recently a man at Union City found a tramp in his barn smoking.—He asked him to desist, and got an insult for an answer. The proprietor collared him, but he got loose and kicked the proprietor out of the barn.

An animated controversy is going on through the newspapers between the Lutheran clergyman of Warren and Rev. Mr. Merchant, Methodist minister of Tidouste. The subject is whether Christ drank fermented or unfermented wine.

A Paris showman, whose daughter was recently married, presented to his son-in-law, as her fortune, an elephant that danced a fandango, a camel that went down on its knees with its head to the east at sunset, a dog that reckoned up accounts and two canaries that played cards.

A man in prison stretched his hand through the grating of the jail door in Liberty, Mo., recently, and married a young lady on the steps of the building. He had been imprisoned a year for obtaining money under false pretenses. The bride returned to her home and the groom to his cell.

Two laborers named Galligher and Lanigan, quarreled near Stroudsburg, Pa., on Monday evening a week, and Galligher threw Lanigan from a high bluff killing him instantly. Some of the murdered man's friends subsequently caught Galligher, and beat him so severely that his recovery is not expected.

The two-story brick building, occupied by Harrison & Redford, grocers, at Warrensburg, Mo., fell last week, carrying to the cellar, with the debris, A. B. Harrison, one of the firm, who was killed, and George Kane, who was mortally wounded. Several other persons were more or less injured, but none seriously.

A couple applied to a clergyman in Quincy, Ill., to get married, got him to take $3 out of a $20 counterfeit bill for his fee, and then departed, and some of the household who watched them were astonished to see the bride remove her dress in the alley and come forth a young man.

R. G. Mosby, mail carrier, was arrested at Richmond, Va., recently, for purloining sundry amounts from registered letters. Mosby was entrapped by a decoy letter containing five dollars, two of which, marked, were found on his person at the time of his arrest. Mosby was committed in default of $5000 bail.

The mysterious and almost deadly poisoning of Dr. J. O. Whitney and wife of Pawtucket, R. I., with a bottle of ale the other day is explained by the confession of Wm. Burbanks, lately the doctor's office boy, who got angry because the doctor wouldn't give him $15, which wasn't due him, and so put strychnine in the ale.

MEMPHIS, June 18.—A storm last evening broke loose from their moorings all the steamboats at the levee, and blew down the smoke stacks of the Osceola Bell, damaging the boat to the extent of about $1,500. The other boats were uninjured. The Cumberland Presbyterian church, on Court street, and several residences were unroofed.

They have a good way of attending to burglars down in Nashville. The other night a fellow was discovered trying to break into a store. In his alarm he ran into the arms of two policemen. Pretty soon thirty or forty men assembled, took the burglar from the officers, and soon his dead body was in the Cumberland river.

This is vouched for by the Boston Traveller as being as true as most of the dog stories: A mastiff in that city, unmuzzled by his master, resolved to comply with the law on his own account. He knew that to preserve his life he must have a muzzle. Early one morning he stole twenty newspapers from doormats, stood on a corner and sold them, went with the money to a store where muzzles were sold, made a clerk understand that he wished to buy one, and before noon went home muzzled according to law.

As the evening Pinegrove train was coming to Lebanon on Saturday, it ran over and instantly killed a man lying on the railroad, about two miles the other side of Jonestown. It proved to be John Wolf, a wood-cutter, residing a mile west of Mifflin. He had been at Jonestown, and had started to walk home on the railroad track.

Frederick Hendricks, a wealthy farmer of McLean county, Ill., about fifty years of age, murdered his wife on Friday night in a fit of drunken rage, and then committed suicide. He had long been unfaithful to his wife, and the provocation for the murder was a remark made by her on his bringing to the house a girl, who, he said, was to supply his wife's place.

A Pera telegram says it is reported that at the capture of Ardahan several Russian soldiers were guilty of killing citizens and outraging women. The atrocities reached the ears of the commander, who ordered an investigation, and the end of the matter was that the battalion, to which the criminals belonged, was ordered out and shot.

Wednesday morning the dead bodies of four "tramps" were found crushed in an old lime kiln not far from Norristown.—A fifth tramp giving the name of Charles Blake, of Massachusetts, was so badly injured that it was thought he would die.—He says that in the night the party camped on the deserted kiln, and the walls being weak gave way and all were carried down with the ruins.

Jonathan Graves, a colored man living near Wilmington, Delaware, quarreled with his wife on Saturday, and fired a gun loaded with bird shot at her. The shot lodged in the head of his grandchild, a girl of eleven years, killing her instantly.—Graves says he merely wished to frighten his wife and the gun was discharged accidentally.

Two boys, Clifford Isenbower and Eddie Dunnovent, aged eight and nine years respectively, while playing in a bin of shelled corn, while the corn was running out into a car at Sandborn, Ind., were drawn under the corn by the suction and smothered. When found they were in an erect position. The accident was discovered by the hats of the boys remaining on the top of the corn.

Last week near Martinsburg on the branch road a train of cars ran over a sheep. A little lamb was with the sheep, its mother, at the time, and after the train hands had pitched the dead mother off the track the little one remained by its side and could not be driven away. Some repair hands who were working near by buried the sheep, but the orphan stayed by the grave for four days and under no circumstances, not even for food or drink, would it leave.

A jaded, tattered German trudged into Baltimore, and inquired at the police station if any of the officers had seen a man and a woman, whom he described. They were his wife and the man with whom she had eloped, he said, and he had traced them from his home in Western Pennsylvania. They had taken all his money, so that they were able to ride, and he was compelled to walk. The police learned that they had sailed for Germany, and he has sailed in pursuit, his passage being paid by charitable persons.

A burglar broke into a Kansas City house in which Mrs. Gray was alone, and told her if she made any noise or attempted to get out of bed he would kill her. She was frightened, and did not speak or stir while he packed her silverware and jewelry for removal. Then, by way of emphasizing a parting injunction not to raise an alarm, he boxed her ears. That made her so angry that she forgot her fear. She jumped out of bed, knocked the burglar down with a chair, pulled his hair, scratched his face, stamped on him, and yelled at the top of her voice. A police officer heard the racket, and the badly injured man was arrested.

A young lady school teacher to Allamakee Co., Ind., had a lover whose affection turned to rage in a singular manner. Last Tuesday, declining to receive his attention any more, she gave him the mitten. This sorely perplexed the young man. He packed up his duds before leaving the country, but before going called at the school to say farewell. After a few minute's conversation he requested the favor of a parting kiss, and reached out to embrace her, when she struggled under bashful modesty. Seizing the opportunity, he drew her face to his and bit her nose nearly off. The end part hung by the gristle, and was sewed in place by a neighboring surgeon. With the best possible care she will be disfigured for life.

Summer life at Newport, R. I., is thus summed up by a correspondent: "It consists chiefly in bringing city manners, habits and customs into the country. The exclusives do not bathe in the ocean; they have salt water brought to them in the barrel. In this way they avoid the heat and sun and 'the hotel people' who visit the beach, and help to support the deserving persons who carry about the water barrels. They do not walk or row, they seldom sail, and if they fish they hire men to bait their hooks for them. They strictly observe all the formalities and ceremonies of city life, drive out in the afternoon, dress themselves two or three times a day, and in the evening the ladies criticize each other and talk about their clothes. A more useless, and all things considered, a more tiresome exercise could not well be imagined. But then it is fashionable, and costs a great deal of money."

A novel scene occurred as the western train was leaving the Montreal depot, a few days ago. It appears that a marriage took place four years ago between a young man from a western city and a handsome young lady residing in that city. The couple resided peaceably there for some time with the young lady's mother, until the mother of the young man arrived in town and persuaded him to go home again. The wife and mother-in-law hearing of his contemplated departure hastened to the Bonaventure depot just a few minutes before the departure of the train. A scene then occurred. The young man was held firmly by his mother, and notwithstanding all the efforts of his wife he was unable to move. The conductor put an end to the scandal by entering the car and ordering those without tickets to leave the train. The young wife was carried from the car fainting, and the train proceeded with her unfaithful husband and his triumphant mother.
