The Dutchman's Cheese.

A German resident relates the following thrilling adventure:

"I goes to Utica last week, and I meets a frint, und we walks and we talks, so we comes mit a grocery store und my frint say he buy some limburger, und so I buys some too, more as a pound. Vell, I comes mit the depot, und shumps on the car, und I can't find no seat all the while, und I sits myself mit another feller.

"Dose car was very warm, und dot oder man he begins to sniff up mit his nose, und then he raises der window about an Inch. Dot cheese, it smell big, und I kon't say nodings. Dose dot oder feller he sniff his nose up to himself some more, und he looks at me sorter queerlike, you know, und he gives dot window another hitch up. Den he got up und look all around dot seat, und in dot aisle, und before, und behind, und I say noding. Den he look at me und I say:

"My frint, you don't smell nodings?" "Und I say 'No,' und I almost die mit myself, so he hist dot window wide open und shtick out his head und shware mit himself like eferdyngs. Ven we got to Rome dot oder feller he foller me clear to the car door, und sthants on der platform und watch me so long as I am in sight.

"Do you know I makes up my mind dot feller he don't got no limburger where he liffs, ven he is at home mit himself."

Our friend Jones has been doing homage to a pair of bright eyes, and talking tender things by moonlight. A few evenings since, Jones resolved to "make his destiny secure."

Accordingly he fell upon his knees before the fair Dulcinea, and made his passion known. She refused him flat. Jumping to his feet, he informed her in choice terms that there were as good fish in the sea as ever were caught.

Judge of the exasperation of our worthy swain when she coolly replied: "Yes; but they don't bite at toads!" Jones has learned a lesson.

"A youngster at the table the other night," writes a correspondent, "asked his mother if sausages were ripe yet, and was told that sausages did not grow. 'Yes they do,' said he stoutly, 'for I saw a whole branch of green ones in a fruit store to-day.' It was necessary to enlighten him with regard to the difference between bananas and sausages.—The Dayton Democrat has seen a horse in that place eat meat. We have frequently seen horses run for stakes here with a bit in their mouths.

The silver joke is as follows: "Hallo," remarks one man, going up to a friend, "how do you like the new silver pieces, three to a dollar?" at the same time jingling the silver in his pocket. Of course the friend says there are no silver pieces three to the dollar, when the first produces them, two quarters and a half, and the couple go across the street.

Lady L., who knows nothing about housekeeping, especially in the country, and who intends to give a series of strawberry-and-cream garden parties at her country seat, thus writes to the man in charge of the place: "Tell the gardener to begin growing strawberries immediately, and mind and don't have the cows milked till we come down."

A physician was called upon to attend a seamstress who felt indisposed. He inquired as to her health, and she responded very appropriately, "Well it's about sew sew, doctor, but seams worse to-day, and I have frequent stitches in the side." The doctor hemmed as he felt her pulse, and said she would mend soon, and left a prescription.

San Francisco has a lover of the true, old-fashioned sort. Being heavily fined by the police court for kissing his betrothed against her will, instead of breaking the engagement, he wrote: "Dearest, you will have to wait now, until I can borrow enough money to pay the minister."

"I want five cents' worth of starch?" said a little girl to a grocer's clerk. The clerk wishing to tease the child, asked: "What do you want five cents' worth of starch for?" "Why, for five cents, of course," she answered, and the clerk concluded to attend to his own business.

At a recent revival meeting held at Bad Ax, Mich., a young man concluded a fervent address by saying, "I wish to be a friend to the friendless, a father to the fatherless, and a widow to the widowless."
