A Little Fun.

Charles Rich wanted to explain to the Court how it was. When he got the word "go" he began: "Well, I and another fellow sat down to play a game of euchre for the beer. I shuffled and he cut."

"Cut you with a knife, eh?" asked his honor. "No, sir cut the cards. Then I dealt." "You dealt him a blow?" "Oh, no; I dealt out the cards. Then we began to play. He threw down a king."

"What King did he throw down—what is Mr. King's name?" "He threw down the king of spades, sir, and I took it."

"You took it, eh? Did you take it kindly, as an insult, or how? Or did you take it and put it in your pocket?" "Well, Judge, if you can't play euchre, I can't go into particulars. It was all in fun you see. We had a dispute about the last trick, and he called me a liar and ran out doors. I was trying to catch him when the officer here caught me. I am very sorry, sir, and I hope this will be a great moral lesson to me never to—to—"

"To what?" "To let a man outrun me after calling me such a name as that."

"Charles Rich, I know nothing about the game of euchre," said the court after clearing his throat. "If a Congressman should want to sit down with me to while the time away I would be a mere toy in his hands. I can't tell Jack from first base, or an ace from left field. I'd just be as apt to carom out the red ball as to pass through the arch. I don't know whether it's white to play and mate in two moves, or see who can get into the king row first. But Charles Rich, I do know you are fined five dollars for disturbing the peace, and if the other man had been caught he'd have got the same dose from the same bottle."

The prisoner couldn't play against that lone hand, and he paid up and departed.

It is a strange thing to see a city chap at a country party, but he was there, and in his conversation with one of the prettiest lasses, ventured to inquire: "Were you ever at a watering place?" "Oh, yes," replied she, "I live right at one."

"Indeed!" exclaimed he, growing interested, "where might it be?" "Oh, just out here a little way," was her innocent reply, "my father keeps the railroad tank."

The city chap, wondering whether she was in earnest or making fun of him, there dropped the subject.

A man who had lost a valuable rooster went to a neighbor's to ask if the fowl had been seen in that quarter. "No," said the neighbor, "I never had a rooster on my premises." Just then the rooster gave a rousing crow. "Why, there he is, now!" exclaimed his owner. "Oh, well," indignantly responded the neighbor, "if you choose to take the crow of a rooster against my word, it's time our acquaintance comes to an end!" And it did.

The colored people held a meeting, a few days ago, in Caldwell county, N. C., to pray for rain. One brother was called upon who prayed after this manner: "O Lord God, us poor niggers is perishing dis year; an' ef you don't gib us rain we will perish next year, too. So, good Lord, gib us rain. Don't gib us one of dese little slippery-slappies; but do, good Lord, gib us one ob dem gully-washers and trash-movers."

Amateur sportsman returns in great triumph from a day's shooting with a hamper, and says to his wife: "There, you said I couldn't shoot. You didn't expect to see me bring this home?" "Yes, I did; the servant next door saw you buying it round the corner."

A Frenchman, stopping at a tavern, asked for Jacob. "There is no such person here," said the landlord. "Tis not any person I want, sare; but ze beer make warm wid ze poker." "Well," answered the landlord, "that is 'flip'." "Ah! yes, sare, you are in ze right; I mean Philip."

A clergyman seeing a young man standing in the doorway of the church, and looking hesitatingly about, paused in the midst of his sermon and exclaimed, "Go out, young man, she is not here."
