A NEW YORK wholesale grocer who has become rich in his business, lately gave one of his fundamental rules of action. When he sold a bill of goods on credit it was his custom to immediately subscribe for the local paper of his debtor. So long as his customers advertised liberally and vigorously he rested, but as soon as he began to contract his advertising space he took the fact as evidence that there was trouble ahead, and he invariably went for his debt. "For," said he, "the man who is too poor to make his business known is too poor to do business." This withdrawal of an advertisement is an evidence of weakness that business men are not slow to observe.

Senseless Panie in a Church.

During funeral services in a Methodist Church at Norfolk, recently, just as the pastor announced his text, a lady in the back part of the church said: "I smell fire," and took her child and went hurriedly toward the door. An alarm then spread through the church, which became a scene of the wildest consternation. The screams of the bewildered women and affrighted children, of mothers calling in an agony of terror for their little ones, and the appeals of "save me! save me!" filled the church. Those not incumbered rushed for the windows and frantically threw themselves out, regardless of the height. Singularly enough, no one was hurt beyond some slight bruising. Men in the galleries became paralyzed and incapable of helping themselves, and had it not been for Robert Shearer, a New York stevedore, who was in the gallery, many would have been trampled to death on the stairs. By physical force he kept back the crowd and urged them to be quiet, assuring them there was no danger. The Mayor, Police and Fire Department arrived in a short time, when, after considerable effort, tranquility was restored. Many ladies fainted, and how they escaped being trampled to death is a marvel.

Saving a Lioness from Choking to Death.

Last Saturday at the Zoological Gardens, just after the animals had been fed, the attendants were startled by the choking sounds proceeding from the lion's den, and the man who distributed the food among the animals at once discovered that the lioness had been pertaking rather ravenously of her meal of raw meat, and that a portion of gristic had evidently lodged in her throat.

Discovering the painful condition of the valuable animal, which was in imminent danger of choking to death, the feeder opened the door of the cage, and, with a dexterous movement, sprang inside, seizing the lioness by the tail, hoping that by swinging her around the impediment might be removed from her

The attempt was fruitless, as the lioness was becoming almost exhausted. Relief could not be delayed many minutes, and this the feeder well knew ; so baring his arm to the elbow he thrust it in the mouth of the lioness and brought forth the piece of gristle, and then as quickly as he had entered the enge jumped out again, before the queen of beasts had time to realize what was the matter.

On Sunday at the Zoological Garden a keeper was patting the Indian bull, but the animal did not appreciate the caresses of his friend, and suddenly turning dealt him several severe thrusts with his horns, injuring the keeper very severely.-Philadelphia Star.

Counterfeit National Bank Notes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. - A list of counterfeit national bank notes, arranged on a plan perfected by Receiving Teller Underwood, of the National Bank Redemption Agency, will soon be issued. It is so arranged that any one, without being a judge of money, can readily deteet a counterfeit. An examination of n advance copy reveals the following facts: The counterfeiters have, so far, neglected to pay any attention to the name of the Register on the genuine notes; all the 20s on the market-Merchants', National Bank of Commerce, Shoe and Leather, and Tradesmen's National Bank of New York city, bearing the name of L. E. Chittenden as Register, are counterfelt. The genuine notes on these banks all have the name of is. E. Colby as Register. This is also the case with the 20 on the Oneida National Bank of Utica, N. Y. All five dollar notes of the following banks bearing the name of S. B. Colby as Register, are counterfeit: First National Bank of Aurora, Illinois; Canton, Illinois; Chicago, Illinois; Paxton, Illinois, and Northampton, Mass. All the genuine fives on these banks have the name of L. E. Chittendon as Register, with the exception of the first National Bank of Paxton, Ill., on which is printed the name of John Allison as Register. The counterfeit ten on the Muncie National Bank of Indiana has the name of Allison as Register, and Spinner as Treasurer, while all genuine issues have either the name of Colby and Spinner or Allison and New. All tens on the First National Bank of Lockport, N. Y., and First National Bank of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., having the name of S. B. Colby, as Register, are counterfeit. The genuine notes bear the name of L. E. Chitten-

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13, 1877.

We hear much talk now-a-days that bears ominously upon the subject of war with Mexico. It is stated on good authority that both the President and Secretary of State look upon such a possibility rather with favor than with reluctance and misgivings, on the ground that much good would necessarily result from such an evil. I quote from a leading journal on the subject : "To the governing class it would seem a good thing to get up an excitement that would divert attention from the numerous unwelcome issues of home politics and give employment to our thousands of discontented poor. To the political class it would appear a good expedient, now that party fealty is waning, to rally public enthusiasm around the Administration. To the speculative class, including those of the politician sort, it would be a God send to have a return; to the era of army contracts, Government loans and public extravagance. To the Texas Pacific interests it would be the opening of new prospects of success. To the pioneer adventurers it would promise the realization of their dreams of railroad enterprise, colonization schemes and mining ventures. To the military class it would be a welcome relaxation from their monotonous idleness. With the South it would be popular as an extension of its territory and the realization of its supposed destiny. While to a more general class it would be attractive as a stimulant to general trade, helping the country through the dreary depression that has so long afflicted it."-Combining the influence of all these classes it is easily conceivable that the Administration may be persuaded that enough has been borne from Mexico, and that her continued bad "neighborship" warrants our chastising her and annexing as much of her territory as seems good to us. But Oh, if it be possible, let us not have to drink again the bitter cup of war. Let us bear yet a little longer with the troublesome people, if so by they will conclude to exercise the better part of valor and behave themselves in a more seemly manner. Give us anything to bear, only save us the dear lives of our brothers, sons, and husbands.

Frosty nights have now arrived, and, although none but Southerners would deem it really cold, there is a good deal of shivering among the lower classes, who are for the most part poorly clad and poorly housed. The various public charities are organizing-they always are forcibly reminded that the poor are ever among us. The night-lodging house has just opened for the winter, and its very first night was full. Of course there is nothing to pay by those who avail themselves of this generosity of the Capital public and the only recommendation required is the applicant's need. Lodgers are furnished with a supper and b reakfast of bread and hot coffee, a bath and a clean bed. Never a night passed last winter but this place was full.

The Labor exchange is also doing algood work in furnishing employment to those in need. It has now twenty or thirty women engaged in making paper bags for the furnished work for hundreds of men in the last few weeks. It proposes now to establish a "Penny Restaurant" from which can be furnished a dish of soup, baked beans and other nourishing and hearty meals for from one to five cents each. This will be the greatest help of all in the way of assisting the hundreds of poor working people who find it impossible to make both ends meet with the scant earnings, poor fuel and all.

Society is as quiet as it was in the heat of last midsummer, life in the White House included. I fancy good Mrs. Hayes, patriotic as she is, will tire of the publicity of her life and long for her cosy and comfortable home in Ohio, where every room spoke out the domesticity of its mistress.-Their parlor was simply and tastefully furnished, but had none of that stiff, best room look that so many parlors have. The principal ornaments of the room were excellent portraits of the family, a life size statue of General Grant in terra cotta, a photograph of Lincoln and one or two steel BETA.

Well-bred Parisians never "treat." In public resorts, cafes, buffets, etc., the French system of every man paying for his own drinks is strictly observed, save in the case of beggars, who are treated some-times to a cup of coffee, but never to whiskey.

At Archibald, nine miles North of Scranton, the house of Daniel Atkinson was broken into Sunday evening during the absence of the family at church and robbed of $700 in bonds and $200 in currency. The thieves made good their escape, and despite the most diligent search have thus far evaded capture.

A gentleman who visited a public school taught by a young lady in Oswego, the other day, at her request made an address to the scholars, and astounded them and overwhelmed the teacher at the end of his remarks by saying that he was very glad to see them doing so well, and hoped that they would all prize and love their teacher as he loved her.

A man in Venango contracted with a doctor to remove some of the bodies of the latter's relatives to a new cemetery and claimed a short time subsequently to have performed the task. It has since been discovered that the bodies have not been disturbed, but that the head stones of the old graves have been removed to the cemetery where the bodies were to have been taken.

A young man named Jacob Shank, a school teacher, of near Chambersburg, was hunting on Thanksgiving day, and as he fired his gan, it blew the breach out, striking him in the forehead, crashing through the skull and imbedding itself in his brain. Medical aid was procured and the breech extracted. The young man is doing well and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

A few days ago, while a Morris county, New Jersey lady was engaged in preparing some cabbage for dinner, she came across a spotted snake, nicely curled up under the leaves, where he had taken up winters quarters. On being disturbed, he at once asserted his rights, by showing his forked tongue. It is needless to say that he was soon compelled to surrender and submit to the fate pronounced on his kind in Scripture.

It cannot always with safety be assumed that rich people who ask for credit are those who pay most promptly. The experience of business men have long since exploded this idea. The fact is, that in a Agricultural Department, besides having great many cases the most undesirable buyers on trust are rich people. They presume upon their wealth and regard a demand for payment as an imputation upon their honor. All that can be said of such people is, that they are dishonest, for certainly it cannot be regarded as honesty to buy goods from any person and refuse or neglect to pay promptly for them when you have the ability.

Stop that Cough, or it will terminate in that dreadful disease, consumption. We are aware that a prejudice exists among many persons against medicines which profess to cure a cough or cold when bordering on consumption, or even when the lungs are affected, but we can assure our readers that Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry will do all this; and in making this assertion we speak from experience, having suffered for months from a cough, which after using many remedies without any relief, threatened to terminate seriously. We were, however, so fortunate as to secure several bottles of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and are now entirely rid of the cough, and restored to our former health. To those suffering in a like manner we recommend this excellent preparation.
