KANSAS.

All about its Soil, Climate, Resources, Products, Laws, and its People are given in the KANSAS FARMER, a 10-page Weekly, in its 15th year. Post paid, 3 months, 50 cents. Address: J. K. HUDSON, Topeka, Kansas.

Has quickly taken a high place among agricultural journals.—N. Y. Tribune. We have considered it among the best of our exchanges, and a worthy representative of the West.—Practical Farmer, Phila. Our Kansas friends should feel much pride in the high character and sterling worth in their State Capital agricultural paper.—National Live-Stock Journal. We cheerfully credit it with being one of the best edited of our Western agricultural exchanges.—Spirit of the Times, N. Y.

"There," said Jones as he wrathfully pushed away the pig which his landlady had just served him, "the stuff isn't fit for a hog to eat, and I ain't going to eat it."

James and Thomas Hart were arrested in a Colorado town the other day for jointly beating a barkeeper. These must be the persons referred to by the poet when he spoke of "two Harts that beat as one."

A politician, writing to the widow of a deceased member of the Legislature, says: "I cannot tell you how pained I was to hear that your husband had gone to heaven. We were bosom friends; but now we shall never meet again."

An Irishman who got laughed at for making faces over some persimmons, replied thusly: "Ye may grin, you mution-headed idiots! but I can lather the soul out of the man that spilt vinegar over them plums."

An inveterate toper, in the locality where the ardent was under the ban, put some rock candy in a bottle, rubbed the neck with camphor, and then had the druggist fill it with whiskey. The wife of the purchaser was "troubled so much with the headache."

"I say, Sambo," said one Virginia darkey to another, can you answer this conundrum; s'posin I gib you a bottle of whiskey corked shut with a cork how would you get the whiskey out without pullin' de cork or breakin' de bottle?" "I gibs dat up." "Why push de cork in."

An invalid Frenchman who hired a horse every evening from a livery stable, particularly desired the hostler to see that the horse had nothing to eat for dinner. "Because," he remarked, "Monsieur le docteur he say I mus' tak' ze gentle exercise on ze empty stomach."

A contemporary explains "Why do young men leave the farm," but he doesn't say that many of them leave it to see their girls in their neighboring village, and others leave it to go the city and see the elephant and come back with a headache ten feet in diameter and their pockets minus fifteen dollars.

One of two young ladies who recently visited the city, from the country, wrote home as follows: "We attract a good deal of attenshun while promenadin' the streets like other lads and holden up our cloze. Nobody isn't notlin' now a days, which don't hold up there cloze, and the hier you holds 'em, the more attenshun you attrax."

"Tommy, my son, fetch in a stick of wood." "Ah! my dear mother," replied the youth, "the grammatical portion of your education has been sadly neglected. You should have said "Thomas my son, transport from that recumbent collection of combustible material upon the threshold of this edifice one of the curtailed exorcences of a defunct log."

"Your handwriting is very bad indeed," said a gentleman to a young college friend who was more addicted to boating and cricketing than to hard study. "You really ought to learn to write better." "Ay, ay!" returned the young man, "it is all very well for you to tell me that; but, if I were to write better, people would be finding out how I spell."

In church, on a recent Sunday morning, the usual donning of overcoats was proceeding amid considerable confusion, but had not been completed when the pastor arose to pronounce the benediction. He paused a minute, and said: "Brethren I guess I'll put on my overcoat hereafter during the benediction, so as not to lose any time."

A lawyer the other day went into a barber's shop to procure a wig. In taking the dimensions of the lawyer's head the barber exclaimed, "Why, how long your head is, sir!" "Yes," replied the legal gentleman, "we lawyers must have long heads." The barber proceeded about his vocation, but at length exclaimed, "Why, sir, your head is as thick as it is long!" Blackstone winced.

"John," said a poverty-stricken man to his son, "I've made my will today." "Ah! you were liberal to me no doubt." "Yes, I've come down handsomely. I've willed you the whole State of Virginia—to make a living in, with the privilege of going elsewhere if you can do better.

He was a tramp. As he watched the merchant pace his store with cast-down eyes, he shook his head. "Poor fellow," said the tramp. "I feel for him. Note to pay probably, and probably, ten cents to do it with. Ah, gentlemen, fortune cannot smile upon us all; but I tell you it is a precious thing to know how you stand every Saturday night. Ah, yes," he said with a sigh, "poor fellow he is doomed to bear burdens which we know nothing of."
