Rather Awkward.

A good story is told of a Hartford insurance man, who some years ago, soon after his marriage, went to a country town in Maine with another adjuster to settle a loss. Arriving at the tavern at a late hour in the night, they were given a room with a forty-pound feather bed therein, which, from its temperature, had evidently been under the influence of some human warming pan; in fact, as it appeared, the room had been occupied up to the midnight arrival of the adjusters by the landlord's daughter, who, in her hurried departure to make room for these distinguished arrivals, left her chemise hanging under the bed post. The newly married Hartford underwriter, in unpacking his valise after his return home to the presence of his affectionate bride, turned out, among its other contents, to the astonished eyes of himself and bride, the aforesaid chemise, which had been carefully packed away by his diabolical companion. It is gratifying to be able to record that as the honeymoon was yet young, this explanation, with all its lameness, was accepted.

Archbishop Cullen was making his periodical tour of inspection in the Dublin Sunday schools. "Kate Molony," said he to an intelligent-looking girl, "explain the meaning of the sacrament of holy matrimony." A pause. At last Kate replied, "please yer honor, it's the state of existence before entering purgatory." "Go to the bottom of the class, you ignorant girl," cried out the local clergyman, very much ashamed of his pupil. But the Archbishop stopped him. "Not so fast, Father Patrick—not so fast. The last may be right after all. What do you or I know about it?"

A "digger" from California, eulogizing the climate, says: "There's a mountain there—the Sawyer Navaday they call it—with a valley on each side of it—the one hot, and t'other cold. Well! Git on the top of that mountain with a double-barreled gun, and you can, without movin', kill either summer or winter game, just as you will." "What! have you ever tried it?" "Tried it! often—and should have done pretty well but for one thing." "Well what was that?" "I wanted a dog that would stand both climates. The last dog I had froze off his tail while 'pintin' on the summer side. He didn't get entirely out of the winter side, you see."

"That's where the boy's fit for college," said the professor to Mrs. Partington, pointing to a school-house. "Did they," said the old lady, with ambition. "Then if they fit for college before they went, they didn't fight afterwards?" "Yes," said he, smiling, and favoring that deceit; "but the fight was with the head, not with the hands." "Butted—did they?" said the old lady.

The color of a girl's hair is regulated by the size of her father's pocket-book. If the latter be plethoric, the girl's tresses are golden or Auburn. If the old man's wallet is lean, we hear the daughter spoken of only as "that red-headed gal." You never saw a rich girl with red hair.

A Lowell firm recently sent a lot of bills West for collection. The list came back with the result noted against each name, one being marked "dead." Three months after the same bill got into a new lot that was forwarded, and when the list came back the name was marked "still dead."

An impatient boy, while waiting for the grist at the mill, said to the miller: "I could eat the meal as fast as your mill grinds it!" "How long could you do so?" asked the miller. "Till I was starved to death," retorted the boy.

The following case of absence of mind is reported in an American paper. An old lady, after stirring the fire with her knitting-needle, took up the poker to knit with, and did not find out her error till she began to scratch her head with it.

We once asked the venerable punster Catlin, why a certain point on the Mississippi was called "Maiden's Bluff," and he innocently answered, "Because its a-vergin' on the river."

A father of three sons and five daughters was asked what family he had. The answer was: "I have three sons, and they have each five sisters." "Mercy!" replied the interrogator; what a family!

In reading a hymn to be sung, one Sunday afternoon, a New York minister recently said: "You may omit the fourth verse; I don't believe its true."
