Pennsylvania Railroad Election.

PHILADELPHIA, March 26. - In the Pennsylvania Railroad election here today the regular ticket was successful.

The Board of Directors are now constituted as follows:

Thomas A. Scott, Josiah Bacon, Wis-tar Morris, John M. Kennedy, S. M. Felton, Alexander Biddle, N. Parker Shortridge, Henry M. Phillips, D. B. Cummins and Henry D. Welsh.

The funding plan recommended in the majority report of the committee was also adopted.

The Bell Punch Liquor Bill.

HARRISBURG, March 26 .- In the House to-day the Ways and Means Committee reported favorably on the Bellpunch Liquor bill. It provides that after January 1, 1879, all dealers in spiritous, vinous and malt liquors, except such as are hereinafter excepted, shall pay a tax of one cent on each drink of alcoholic or vinous liquors, or any admixture thereof, and a tax of one-half cent upon each drink of malt liquor sold or drunk on the premises of any licensed to sell at retail ; said taxes to be paid into the county treasury. Every person or firm engaged in the sale of liquors at retail shall have attached to the counter over which said liquors are sold one register marked alcoholic liquors and one marked malt liquor.

A Sensation in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, March 27 .- Mary Alice Kernan, a handsome brunette 21 years old, and a singer in the Cathedral, left her home last Friday, telling her mother that she was not well and would go to New Brighton and spend a few days, when she would return. She was found in the Homeopathic Hospital here last night, dying from the effects of an abortion performed by a Dr. Marshall. A saloon keeper named Stroup has been arrested in connection with the affair. Marshall has not yet been found. The dead girl was smart and intelligent. She had the reputation, however, of being rather fast in her manner of life, and had numerous male friends .- Tribunc.

was not entitled to liberty, but was an escaped prisoner after conviction, and must, therefore, be delivered to the sheriff and the original sentence be carried out. In a word, the prisoner, who was trying to crawl out of the court through a knot-hole of a technicality, was ordered to be hanged. This was more than she and her lawyer had bargained for. As soon as she was taken to the county jail, she opened proceedings in error and applied for a reversal of the judgment and order which she herself had procured. The Supreme Court now rules that the decision of the court below was wrong in affirming that a prisoner must consent to a commutation of sentence, and decides that Mrs. Victor must be sent back to the penitentiary for life .--Washington Law Reporter.

A Woman's Adventure with a Burglar.

Mrs. J. F. Bentel, a widow living at Freedom, Beaver county, had a thrilling experience a few nights ago with a burglar. The only occupants of the house were Mrs. Bentel and a domestic living with her, and they were sleeping in the same room, but in different beds. In the night, or rather about 3 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. B. was awakened by a noise in the room, and upon opening her eyes she could plainly see by the light which had been left burning a man standing before her. As soon as he observed that she was awake, he threatningly pointed a revolver at her, though while in the house he never spoke a word. Any explanation of these movements, however, would have been entirely superfluous. She knew what she might expect if she cried out or gave the alarm in any way. He made a thorough search of the room, went up stairs, examined that part of the house, and then returned to the sleeping apartment of the women. He gathered up everything of value he could find and carry away, but missed a great many things that he doubtless would have taken had he discovered them. As he was leaving the house Mrs. B. gained sufficient strength to arouse her girl Josephine. In calling her " Jo," the burglar evidently thought that a man was being summoned, for he very materially hastened his departure.

Mrs. Bentel says she never before in her life experienced such agony as during the time - fully two hours it seemed to her-that the burglar was in the house. She could only lie perfectly still and pray. At the close of this experience her hair was literally wringing wet with perspiration, and she was so weak from the fright and excitement that she could scarcely summon enough strength to support her on her feet.

A Funny Mishap.

A Baltimore paper of recent date says: Quite a ludicrous incident occurred in Trotter's court, near Iron alley, in East Baltimore, a day or two ago. Mr. Moses Fox, livery stable keeper, Nos. 8 and 10 Bethel street, had purchased three tons of hay from Alexander D. Brown of Balto, county. The load was being hauled by four strong mules in charge of James Stanton. As the team entered Trotter's court, which is only twelve feet in width, it became stuck fast between the walls of the houses on either side, an extent as to give promise of another Chicago disaster.

Before the flames were extingushed, over thirty buildings had been burned, causing a loss of probably one million of dollars. The sparks from the burning buildings were carried two squares, causing the loss of three buildings on Second Street. At one time the St. Elmo Hotel was thought to be in danger. the fire having communicated to the roof, but beyond causing a scare to the boarders, no damage was done.

A Terrible Calamity.

LONDON, March 25 .- At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when off Dennose, and proceeding under full sail, a squall struck the training-ship Eurydice and she capsized and sank immediately. The schooner Emma, passing the Eurydice at the time, rescued five passengers, including Lieut, Francis H. Tabor, after they had been an hour in the water Three of these died, so the only survivors of the disaster are Benj. Cuddiford, an able seaman, and Sydney Fletcher, a first class boy. It is believed the Eury. dice had about three hundred and twenty officers and seamen, of which two hundred and seventy were young men in training, besides about twenty officers and men taken on board at Bermuda as Invalids.

A Horrible Death.

The Huntingdon "Journal" relates this incident of the small-pox epidemic : -Frank Moultrie, a colored farmer in Oneida township, residing about one distant from this place, died on Tuesday last from a scrofulous disease, contracted, it is said, by vaccination. He was properly vaccinated by one of the physicians of this place, but his arm failing to get sore, he procured a scab from the arm of a child affected with scrofula and vaccinated himself. His arm soon got very sore, and grew worse from day to day until Tuesday night, when he died. He was a sober and industrious man.

Dead Bodies from the Huron Wreck.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 27 .- Sixty of the Huron dead arrived here from Washington this morning under charge of Lieutenant Commander J. G. Green. Sixteen of the corpses are unknown.

The interment will take place to-morrow with naval honors.

to Some time ago a farmer named Isaac Seldomridge, residing near New Holland, was arrested on a charge of stealing a lot of wheat, and he promptly furnished ball for his appearance to answer the charge. The " Intelligencer" says it has been discovered that he forged a number of notes amounting to several thousand dollars, and that he has disappeared, leaving his brother-inlaw to settle up the forfeited recognizances, as he will not answer the proclamation of the court to " come forth and appear."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 28, 1878. Sunday evening at the White House reminds one of "home and mother," Usually Vice President Wheeler, Gen. Sherman, and one or two other personal friends of the Hayes' drop in for an hour, and sit in the cosy library-which is the most cheerful and home-like room in the house-and sing good old-fashioned hymns, in the good old-fashioned way. Mr. Wheeler is particularly fond of this simple, domestic hymn-singing. He has a clear, sweet voice and so has Mistress Hayes, though neither are much cultured - at least, after the modern style of cultivation. This year the Moody and Sankey Gospel Hymns are sung and discussed by this pleasant group just the same as they are in the humblest cottage in America. Among many other specimens of American industry and invention to be exhibited at Paris are fighting instruments and especially, models of torpedoes. Although our destructive agencies are many and cruel, the latest invention and the most wicked, must be credited to Lieut. Palmer, of the British Navy, who proposes to inaugurate a new method of wholesale killing by deluging a hostile vessel with petroleum by means of powerful ejectors, and then set fire to them by the use of rockets. Full length and life-size pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Hayes are on exhibition here which are to go to the Paris Exposition also; Mr. Hayes is standing, gloves in hand, hat and coat in a chair near by. The light in the picture seems to culminate in the upper part of the face, and makes our President a very handsome man-which he is not by any means. And still, the likeness is a good one. Mrs. Hayes is sitting, dressed in black silk and lace scarf. Her face is noticeable and recognizable anywhere, but this painting scarcely does it justice. Indeed, it is one of those whose coloring and mobile expressiveness give it variety and constitute its charm, and these are things that cannot be put upon canvas. The two extremes never met in society here more beautifully than has been the case this winter in the little circle of Cabinet ladies. These extremes are represonted by Mrs. Thompson, the eldest of the group, who has arrived at the period of caps and white lace tabs for the hair, and manifests a dignified grandmotherness, and slender delicate, girlish Miss Agatha Schurz, who takes her last mother's place as Secretary Schurz's lady. The line of receiving ladies at Mrs. Hayes' last reception was a grand study and most pleasing in its variety. Mrs. Hayes, in her brightest orimson silk and velvet, Mrs. Evarts, in half mourning, Mrs. Sherman, in black velvet and lemon silk, Mrs. McCrary, in dark and pale blue silk, Mrs. Thompson, in black with white laces, Mrs. Key, in peach blossom brocade, and Miss Schurz in black velvet and white silk.

Among many unique ornaments worn here this winter, one that has attracted much attention is a necklace belonging to Senator Spencer's neice, who has lived some time in the Sandwich Islands. It is made of tiger's claws inlaid and set with gold. The claws are in the shape of half moons, and are linked together with medallions of wrought gold. Ladies have worn more natural flowers as trimmings and ornaments this winter than ever before. Florists aver that the demand for their chattels has been far greater than the supply, and New York has been drawn upon to a great extent. One of our recent bride's pretty and novel idea was a fan composed wholly of orange blossoms, Necklaces of natural flowers, drooping flowers, like lilies of the valley, have been, and still are very much worn.

OLIVE. Miscellaneous News Items.

137 A recent tornado in Jackson county, Ga., unroofed a house where lay a corpse, and the sad attendants were left without a shelter.

137 The $180,000 bequest to Franklin and Marshall college and Lancaster theological seminary by Peter Wilhelm, of Somerset county, it is confidently believed will become operative through the action of the sister of the deceased. It is said she has already taken the initiatory steps to secure this result.

13 George Orris, the desperado from Angelica, Butler county, who was convicted in the court at Butler, of burglary, rape and larceny, committed on the 9th inst. in Angelica, was sentenced by Judge Bredin for a period of twelve years at hard labor in the western penitentiary. The judge appeared to be sorry that he could not sentence the prisoner to the gallows.

137 The remains of four men were found smothered to death in a locked cotton car on the Iron Mountain road, on Monday a week. They have been buried at Piedmont. The bodies recovered were horribly disfigured. It is supposed that the men crawled in among the cotton to hide themselves and get a free ride ; that they began smoking, setting the cotton on fire, and were so smothered.

137" On Sunday afternoon a week, while John Connelly of 206 Van Buren street, Brooklyn, was playing with his little son, aged 14 months, who was on his lap, he playfully blew a puff of tobacco smoke into its face. The child coughed, gasped for breath, and fell back unconscious. In a few minutes it died from suffocation. The physician who was summoned said that the child had probably sucked the smoke into its throat and had been unable to discharge it. The father became almost wild with grief.

No bond, note or engraved paper issuing from the Government Bureau of Engraving or Printing has ever been counterfeited. In contrast to this, the vaults of the Secret Service room are filled with captured plates, counterfeiting bank-note companies' work, and tons of such plates have been melted in the navy yard furnaces. Whether the Government should de its own work, with a saving of thousands each year, or contract with the bank note companies, never needs discussion after this fact has been stated.

The fineness of the work discourages counterfeiters at the start, for it would take two of them a year or more to make such a plate as is used in printing $5 notes and its clumsy execution would then betray them. The government employs a dozen or more engravers on a single plate-one making the vignette portrait, another the fine bordering, leaf scrolls, and so on until the costly lathe cuts in all the hair-lines patterns that defy any hand work to equal.

A Strange Legal Muddle.

An interesting decision in criminal practice was recently rendered in the Supreme Court at Columbus, Ohio. Sarah M. Victor, convicted of poisoning her brother, Joseph Parquent, in order to obtain $2,000 life insurance, was originally sentenced to be hanged but as there were symptoms of insanity the governor commuted her punishment to imprisonment for life. While she was in the penitentiary her reason was restored and she-refused to assent to the commutation of the sentence. Having obtained a writ of habeas corpus, she asked the court to release her; but the bench ruled that although she was detained in the penitentiary without warrant of law, inasmuch as she had not consented to the commutation of the sentence, she and the efforts of two hours to remove it proved fruitless.

A number of bystanders attempted in vain to solve the problem how a load of hay measuring sixteen feet across (when close pressed) could be forced through a twelve-foot alley. An attempt was made to unload the hay, but it was so tightly wedged by the exertions of the mules that the latter plan falled. After remaining stuck fast for nearly four hours, an extra team of mules, sent from the hay-scales on Greenmount avenue, were attached, and the team finally released.

Destructive Fire.

At Philadelphia on Monday night of last week a fire broke out a few minutes after 9 o'clock in a lithographic establishment, at the southeast corner of Cherry and Fourth, located in a block of seven five-story, iron front stores, known as the Ketterlinus block, which were erected eight years ago on the site of the old Zion German Lutheran church. The flames spread with marvelous rapidity, and fed by the combustible nature of the material in Mr. Wampole's store, adjacent, soon enveloped the entire building. A strong March wind fanned the flames, and bore them to the adjoining buildings in the Ketterlinus block.

So brightly was the sky illuminated that people from localities as distant as the regions of the Navy Yard, Kensington and West Philadelphia were attracted from their homes by the bright glare. When the firemen reached the ground they found their force inadequate and the fire beyond their control. A second alarm brought reinforcements, and finally the whole department, including the companies from all the suburban districts, were summoned to the scene .--Nevertheless at 10 o'clock the conflagration was at the mercy of the wind, and was spreading itself on each side to such Bloomfield Academy.—Spring Term of twelve weeks begins April 1st, 1878.— Four courses of study.
