Dedicated to the Resolute.

The boy stood squarely on the base— Already two were out— The grin that lighted up his face Shone round about his snout. The boy, he raised the ash aloft And called for one hip high, The pitcher put it in red-hot— He caught it in his eye. Again the gallant youth stood up, Determined he would score— The next one hit him in the punch— He playeth ball no more.

I am Mrs. Jenks with a steel-gray eye; With limbs of the law I am more than fly, I nip the tricky, bamboozle the sly; I'm no raw recruit in the army. I teach the witness how to prance, Retreat, advance With a mocking glance, With a plumb shiver the legal lance, Hurrah for the high Jenks party. For I'm Mrs. Jenks with a chin that's firm; He should go to school for another term, Then enlist five years in the army.

When a loafer enters the sanctum of a busy editor, and the editor says, "Glad to see you're back," what does he mean?

The proper time for a girl to marry is after she has counted her cash and found that she can support herself in case her husband turns politician.

"I wish you had been Eve," said an urehin to a stingy aunt, proverbial for her meanness. "Why so?" "Because," said he, "you would have eaten all the apple instead of dividing it."

Here is the worst pun we have seen in six months: In Alabama they chew the tassels of the fir-trees as a substitute for tobacco, which reminds us of the adage, "Be fir-chewers and you'll be happy."

"What is the national air of this country?" asked a foreigner in Washington.—"That's the national air," replied a native, pointing to the Capitol, "but the animals are all out in the jungle just now, chasing voters."

We met a farmer a day or two ago who was so hard pushed that he was on his way to pawn his hoe. We told him we were sorry to see his case so hopeless. "Hopeless!" he exclaimed; "far from it! You know the old motto, 'hoe-pawn, hope ever.'"

The Difference. The foolish man saith unto the world and the people thereof, "Lo, I am a candidate," but the sharp politician disembeth within himself and declareth unto the folk, "Lo, now, I am in the hands of my friends."

A widower had five grown daughters who wouldn't let him take a second wife. He gave up the wife, but bought a savage dog, and now won't allow a man to cross his door-sill. If he can't marry, the girls shan't, he says. But the girls will give in by-and-by. They can't stand that sort of thing forever.

Why didn't you come home from school earlier?" asked a Florida woman and her little boy answered: "Well that little nig, Cleoro White, he had a norange, and cause he gin it to me when I sot onto him, he told the school-mum I'd 'intimidated' him, so kept me in and just 'bull-doized' me good!"

"Fellow-citizens," said a stump orator, "we have the best country in the world, and the best Government. No persons on the face of the globe enjoy more privileges than we do. Here we have the liberty of speech and liberty of press, without onerous despotism. What, fellow citizens, is more desirable than this? Do you want anything more, my countrymen?" "Yes, sir-ee," said one of his hearers, "I want a sack out of that flask sticking out of your coat-pocket behind."

A Hartford man went home to dinner, and saw part of the washing still left in the tubs. Hurrying to the yard he saw his wife braced against the fence, holding to the end of a broken clothes line to keep the newly-washed garments from the ground. "Here I've been holding this line for over an hour, sir," she snapped. "But why didn't you call someone?" he inquired. "There's that new family next door—the woman would have come over in one minute." But the wife said: "woman next door, you big idiot, you! Hasn't she been peering around for two weeks to see my wash, and d'ye think I'd give her a chance to find out whether the sleeves of my nightgown were piced down with unbleached cotton? You don't know anything, sir, and you make tracks for a piece of rope, sir."
