"I rise, sir, for information," said an official in a Western legislature. "I am glad to hear it," said a wag; "for no one needs it more than you do."

An Arkansas constable's pistol being stolen, he advertised that, if the thief would return it, he would give him the contents and no questions asked.

"My landlady," remarked a man, "Makes her tea so strong that it breaks the cups." "And mine," said another, "makes hers so weak that it can't run out of the pot."

"Mike, and is it yourself that can be after telling me how they make ice cream?" "It is troth I can. Don't they bake them in cold oven, to be sure?"

It was enough to make to a man mad when he reads his advertisement in which he had called attention to a splendid article of Tool Steel, to see it state that he had "Splendid Mackerel and Toad Stools."

A father, fearing an earthquake in the vicinity of his home, sent his two boys to a distant friend's until the peril should be over. A few weeks after, the father received this letter from his friend: Please take your boys home, and send down the earthquake."

A Danbury man, wishing to engage several bushels of potatoes from a party in the suburbs, asked a neighbor what sort of a man he was. "Well," said the conscientious neighbor, "I don't know very much about him, but I should think he would make a tip-top stranger."

A minister was addressing a children's meeting. Wishing to make use of the telephone as an illustration of prayer, he said: "Children, can any of you describe a telephone?" Immediately one little hand went up, and a bright little fellow called out, in a loud voice: "Yes, sir. Two cans and a string!"

An old curmudgeon was sunning himself on the post office steps when a lady came along, having a letter in her hand. She looked up and down the building, hesitated, and asked the man: "Where do you mail your letters here?"

"I always mail my letters inside the building," he calmly replied, "but you can do as you please about it—there's no law to compel you to."

The look she gave him would have knocked a street car off the track.

Some negroes were listening to one of their color as he was reading to them the proceedings of the Legislature from the Constitution recently. When he got down to the Bill "to protect and preserve unimpaired the right of trial by jury," old Si spoke up and said: "What's dat mean? Who's a gwine to hurt de jury?" "Dat means a heap, I'm a tellin' yer! Dat's a good thing!" replied Pete. "Splane it, den! Whar's de nessesaryness fur it?" urged Si. "W'y, dis way," says Pete. "Dar's a gemman down dar at de depo' whar he was on de jury de odder day, an' I hear him tellin' how dat he didn't want ter' gree wid de rest ob 'em, when a big feller came up and tole him ef he didn't 'gree 'bout two secon's dat he bust him wide open? What you tink of dat?" The Bill then received unanimous approval.

He was showing a man the new bay mule that was working in a team with the old gray. "You warrant him sound and perfectly kind and gentle?" asked the customer. "Perfectly," said Farmer John. "My wife and children drive him and he is a perfect pet. Comes into the house like a dog."

"Easy to shoe?" asked the man. "Well, I guess so. The fact is, I never had him shod. I don't believe in it. He works better without it," said Farmer John. "How does he act when you put the crupper on?" asked the man. Farmer John hesitated. "Well, pretty good, I guess," he said. "Fact is, I never put it on."

"Who does put it on?" "Well, I kind of dont know," said Farmer John. "Fact is, he had he harness on when I got him, an' it fit him so well an' he seemed to be so kind o' contented in it, like, that I sort of never took it off'n him." The customer now thought he was standing too close to the animal to see its good points, and he stepped across the road, and then concluded not to buy.
