BOOKS for the MILLION WOMAN A large, new and complete Guide to all the domestic duties, containing, with many others, the following chapters: A complete System of Cookery, &c.

WOMAN MARRIAGE Advice to bridegroom, Advice to husband, and Advice to wife, on all the duties of Matrimony, in its various positions, its causes, its consequences, its joys and sorrows, its duties, its obligations, its sacredness, its sanctity, its holiness, its grandeur, its glory, its beauty, its sublimity, its divinity, its immortality, its eternity, its perpetuity, its immutability, its indestructibility, its inviolability, its invincibility, its invulnerability, its impassibility, its imperturbability, its immobility, its immutability, its immutability, its immutability.

THE Rev. Mr., of the Unitarian Church in a neighboring State preached a sermon a few years since on the importance of saying "No," and in the course of it dwelt impressively on the moral courage required to use that monosyllable at the right time.

Applying the Sermon. The Rev. Mr., of the Unitarian Church in a neighboring State preached a sermon a few years since on the importance of saying "No," and in the course of it dwelt impressively on the moral courage required to use that monosyllable at the right time.

WHY? Why? replied he of the newspaper, "when I went into the church I was fully determined to give five dollars to that charity, but your sermon impressed me so deeply that I found courage to resist the temptation, and let the plate-passer go with an emphatic 'No.'"

Said he—"Matilda, you are my dearest duck." Said she—"Augusta, you are trying to stuff me." She was to sage for him. But she gravely-tated into his arms all the same.

"I say, friend, your horse is a little contrary, is he not?" "No, sir." "What makes him stop then?" "Oh, he's afraid somebody will say 'Whoa,' and he shan't, hear it."

A bachelor paragrapher asks: "What shall we do with our girls?" Marry one and shake the rest of them, young man; you'll find it cheaper in the long run.

It is easy enough, it is said, to pick up a horse if you know how. The best way is to let the lines get under his tail, and then lift; and it will surprise you to see how easily you can raise the horse over the dashboard and into your lap.

"No, darling," he said, as his wife asked for a new dress, "I can't afford it. I feel it my duty to help the suffering poor of the city," and then he went around the corner, and the bar-keeper handed out the bottle and a glass and let him help himself.

A female hanged herself recently because she thought the devil was in her. If every woman is going to do the same thing, cruelly remarked the Brooklyn "Eagle," then—well, woman are going to be dreadfully scarce.

She was a lady passenger in one of the transfer coaches which run from the Shoo Fly depot, and after becoming tired of keeping still she turned to the driver and asked: "How much further does this horrid hill run?" Jehu replied—"Clear to the bottom, madam."

Albany Journal: "Mother, what is an angel?" "An angel? Well, an angel is a child that flies." "But, mother, why does papa always call my governess an angel?" "Well," explained the mother, after a moment's pause, "she is going to fly immediately."

The subject of impression at first sight was being talked over at the tea table, when the lady whose duty it was to preside said, "she always formed an idea of a person at first sight, and found it to be generally correct." "Mamma," said her young son, in a shrill voice, that attracted the attention of all present. "Well, my dear, what is it?" replied the mother. "I want to know what was your opinion when you first saw me?"

"Maxims is what ails me," he said to the police judge. "Maxims busted me wide open." The court said it would like an explanation before fixing the fine. "Well, your honor," said the prisoner, "I drank rye whisky" and I didn't get drunk. I remembered that maxim. "Try try again." I tried rye again—"Here that's enough of that!" thundered the Court; "this ain't no circus ring. Ten dollars and costs."

A Doggone Queer Idea. A New York paper tells about a boarding house that is kept on an economical principle where they have no napkins; but instead of napkins there was a large bushy Newfoundland dog, who went around the table at regular intervals, and as the boarders were inclined to use a napkin, they clutched the dog. The touch went by seniority, the oldest had the first clutch, and the more muscular boarders grabbed the dog and wiped him. "Was a very economical idea, for the dog performed his duty every day through the week, and on Sunday the dog was washed and the boarders had soup."
