More Coming. The brighter lights of the Strakosch opera troupe gathered round them a few friends on Saturday evening, for a quiet little supper.

"He's got a tooth," said a gentleman sitting at one end of the table.

"Max is very proud of his baby," said Miss Kellogg, who was sitting at the other end.

"Yes," said the gentleman, still carrying out his own train of thought, "and he's got two more coming."

Miss Kellogg shrieked and dropped her napkin and her knife and fork, while the gentleman still further enlivened matters by insisting that his reference was solely to the teeth.

It is not generally known that Horace Greely was a West Pointer. When busy, he always pointed and told young men to go west.

"The class in grammar will please stand up and answer this question: 'How do you parse the word dollar?'"

"Please, sir, if it is a trade dollar, you parse it for ninety cents."

A tramp claimed to have drunk brandy and water with Neal Dow, and the whole state of Maine was agitated; but he subsequently explained that he drank the brandy and Neal the water, and peace was immediately restored.

When Johnny was questioned as to why his engagement with Miss H. had been broken off, he rolled his eyes, looking very much pained, and groaned, "Oh! she turned out a deceiver." But he forgot to mention that he was a deceiver whom she had turned out.

An old colored preacher in Atlanta, Ga., was lecturing a youth of his fold about the sin of dancing, when the latter protested that the Bible plainly said, "There's a time to dance."

"Yes dar am a time to dance," said the dark divine; "and it's when a boy gets a whippin' for gwine to a ball."

"Water," said Professor Wortman, waggishly, "is not a vegetable, although it leaves in summer." "No," added the new smart boy who came in this term, "and rum is not a vegetable, although rum blossoms."

And then the teacher said the class would confine its remarks to the text book.

"Got all kinds of ties here?" said a would-be wit, entering a well-known furnishing store. "Yes, sir," replied the shopman. "Well, I should like a pig-stye," replied the customer. "All right, sir; just bend down your hogs-head, and we'll take your measure," said the ready shopman.

A young New Yorker at a party asked and received the consent of a young lady to accompany her home. He waited in astonishment while the company slowly departed, and finally hinted that it was time for them to go.

"Oh!" said she demurely, "I am boarding here."

It was a very honest old Dutch Judge in Schoharie county who listened for several hours to the arguments of counsel and then said: "Dis case has been ferry ably argued on both sides, and dere have been some ferry nice points of law brought up. I shall dake three days to consider these points, but I shall eventually decide for de blahtif."

"Phairest Phlora," wrote an amorous youth who is smitten with the phonetic craze, "phorever dismiss your phears, and phily with one whose phervernt phancy is phixed on you alone. Phriends, phamily, phather—phorget them, and think only of the phelicity of the phuture! Phiew phelows are so phastidious as your Pherdinand, so phaign not phondness if you pheel it not. Phorego phrolic, and answer phinally, Phlora."

"Oh, Pherdinand, you phool!" was phair Phlora's curt reply.

Not as Stupid as He Looked. A stupid looking countryman halted before a blacksmith's shop, the proprietor of which was forging a shoe, and eyed the performance with much interest.

The brawny smith, dissatisfied with the man's curiosity, held the red-hot iron suddenly under his nose, hoping to make him beat a hasty retreat.

"If you give me a sixpence I will lick it," said the countryman. "I'll stop the braggart's jaw," thought the smith, as he took from his pocket a sixpence, and held it out.

The countryman quickly grabbed the coin, licked it, and walked away whistling. "Did you ever catch a weasel asleep?"
