No matter how hard it is to find a rocking chair during the day, a man is sure to fall over one when he is in search of the match box after dark.

A Kansas dog which got drunk on beef soaked in whiskey, no sooner became sober than he drowned himself in the river, same as a man should.

"Voices of the Night" makes a very pretty title for a poem, but the reality is not so enchanting. We refer to the pre-matrimonial conversation carried on in the cellar by our favorite Maltese and a gallant neighbor of the opposite sex.

A raw German who had been summoned for jury duty desired to be relieved, giving this reason: "Schudge, I can nicht goot English understand." Looking over the crowded bar, the judge replied: "Oh! you can serve. You won't have to understand good English. You won't hear any such here."

A gentleman, addresses another gentleman, whom he doesn't know, at a party; "This affair is awfully stupid; let's go out and taken drink." "I would like to do it," was the reply, "but I can't leave very well," "Why not?" "Why, you see, I am the one who is giving the party."

A member of the rhetorical class in a certain college had just finished his declamation when the professor said, "Mr. N—, do you suppose a General would address his soldiers in the manner in which you spoke that piece?" "Yes, sir, I do," was the reply, "if he was half scared to death."

"Is the water all froze up?" asked Aunt Dorothy of Jeems, who was trying to break the water in the rain cask. "No, auntie, I should say it was froze down;" and he turned his axe so as to send a shower of fine ice in the old lady's face. "That's an impudent trick," said she. "Oh, no," said the youngster; "it's an ice response."

The sisters had not been on the most loving terms for some time, when one day a lady visitor praised the good looks of the off-spring of one. "How much he looks like Mrs. Black," said she, "especially when he laughs." Mrs. Black was expressing her pleasure at the compliment implied, when the infant blurted out: "Mamma says I look like a fool when I laugh!" Tableau.

A small boy in Belfast, whose deportment at school had always ranked one hundred per centum, came home one day recently with his standing reduced to ninety-eight. "What have you been doing, my son?" asked the mother.—"Been doing?" replied young hopeful, "been doing just as I have all along, only the teacher caught me this time."

"I should like to have you raise a club," said a seven by nine book canvasser to a daughter of Erin, as he stood on the front step trying to talk her to death on the subject of the "Extinction of the Tribes of the Seventh Century." "I will," said Biddy, as she reached around behind the door, "but bad luck to your picture if you're lingering around here when I get it raised." He didn't linger.

The other evening, at a little dinner party in New York, one of the guests, the younger brother of an English nobleman, expressed with commendable freedom his opinion of America and its people. "I do not altogether like the country," said the young gentleman; "for one reason, because you have no gentry here." "What do you mean by gentry?" asked another of the company. "Well, you know," replied the Englishman, "Well—oh, gentry are those who never do any work themselves and whose fathers before them never did any." "Ah," exclaimed his interlocutor, "then we have plenty of gentry in America, but we don't call them gentry, we call them tramps."

Didn't Like Experiments. A very rich old man had married a young wife, and died suddenly, on which the widow raved like a maniac, and exclaimed to the doctor, who stood by the bedside of the deceased,— "Oh, I'll not believe that my dear partner is dead; he could not die and leave me! No, no! he's alive,—I'm sure he's alive! Tell me, doctor, don't you think so?" "Madam," replied the medical man, with much gravity, "I confess that it is possible that he may be revived. I will apply the galvanic battery." "Oh, no, no!" cried the grief-stricken widow. "Hard as it is to bear my fate, I will have no experiment against the law of nature: let him rest in peace."
