"No, sir," said the gentleman from Pittsburgh, "I was not in the war but my brother was, and he was wounded." "Ah! indeed. Seriously wounded?" "Yes, sir; he was shot in the horse."
A new book is called "The Horse's Foot and How to Shoe It." The author, of course, is a man. When you see a book entitled "The Hen, and How to 'Shoo' It," you can lay a heavy wager that the writer is a woman. What a woman doesn't know about "Shoo"ing a hen, no man can teach her—not by a large majority.
Taking it in the Right Spirit. Benevolent old lady—"Tell your mother, William Stubbs, that I shall call in during the day, and give her a little spiritual comfort." W. S.—"She'll be glad o' that, marm, cos she can't pay the score at the Bull since feyther died, and ain't 'ad no spirits for a week."
Afraid Something had Happened. On the river: "What's the matter, Alfred? You look uneasy." "Well, my wife, who is fond of swimming, dived off the boat some time ago, and has not yet come to the surface; I am afraid something must have happened to her." How long has she been under? "About two hours."
He Was "Figgerin'." Some woman are never satisfied. The other night, when Gallagher was reckoning up his accounts, his wife spoke to him several times, and received no answer said; "You treat me cruelly. I fear you no longer love me." And Gallagher replied; "I love you passionately, devotedly, frantically, madly; but if you don't hold your jaw till I get these figures added, I'll give you a clip in the eye. And in spite of his protestations of love she was not satisfied.
"Who Kissed Me." As a train emerged from the dark tunnel (near Spruce Creek) into open daylight, recently, a handsome and jolly-looking lady, with a twinkle in her eye, inquired, "Who kissed me?" where-upon a modest and somewhat clerical-appearing gentleman sitting in the seat in front turned his head and remarked, "Indeed, madam, it was't me!" which brought forth a short laugh that can be better imagined than described.
A Dog Who Joked. It happened in Indiana. A man who was surveying in the woods, thinking to have some fun with his dog, who was lying near him asleep, gave a shout and a jump into the thicket, as if all the game ever protected by the game laws was dashing through the bushes. Tiger came bounding and barking to the fray and soon detecting the trick that was played upon him, sneaked back to his hair and lay down again. The surveyor resumed his duties, and was hard at work for two or three hours, when all at once the dog rose from his sleep, set his ears and eyes in the direction of the wood, gave a bark and made a rush for the forest depths. The surveyor followed the noble brute to a tree up which he was barking, and began to scan the boughs for the hiding game. Tiger gave a satisfied "Ah wooo!" bestowed a glance of contempt at the surveyor and striking a dignified gait, stalked back to his couch with the appearance of a dog that had squared up all accounts.
A Smart Family. The other morn'ing a citizen called at a hardware store on Woodward avenue and said he wanted a key to a certain door in his house, and he took up and carried away almost the first key handed out to him. On his way down town after dinner he stopped and exchanged the key for another, explained that the first wouldn't fit. These changes took place twice a day for the next four days the citizen being unable to get a key that would fit. On the sixth day he drove up to the store with a door on a dray, and calling to the proprietor he said: "Bring your box of keys out here and we'll get a fit to that lock. Here I have been running back and forth for about a week, and I might not have got a fit for a whole month if my wife had not suggested that I bring the door down here. Some of these women are mighty smart. "But why didn't you take the lock off and bring it down in your pocket?" The buyer looked at him in a vacant way, stared hard at the door and sat down on the curbstone with the remark: "It's a wonder the whole family was not sent to the fool-house 10 years ago."
