KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE Is a sure cure for spavin, splint, curb, callous, sprains, swellings, joints, lameness and all enlargements of the joints of limbs. Remember we claim it will cure a bone spavin and completely remove the bunch without blistering.

Statement Made Under Oath. To Whom It May Concern:—In the year 1875 I treated with Kendall's Spavin Cure a bone spavin of several months' growth, nearly half as large as a hen's egg, and completely stopped the lameness and removed the enlargement. I have worked the horse ever since very hard, and he never has been lame, nor could I ever see any difference in the size of the hock joints since I treated him with Kendall's Spavin Cure. B. J. Kendall, Enosburg Falls, Vt.—Dear Sir:—I received the two bottles of your spavin cure forwarded by express in January last. "Somebody says that at some time 'Fortune taps at every man's door.' Oh yes, that's all very nice, but when a man opens the door in response, nine times out of ten he finds it's the old man's daughter, Miss Fortune, who is waiting there for him.

"Young man," said the orator, impressively, "do you want to go down to a drunkard's grave?" "Well," replied the young man, with the careless grace of a man who isn't accustomed to refusing, "don't care if I do. Whereabouts is your grave?"

A very loquacious female witness, whom the opposing counsel could not silence so far kept him at bay that, by way of brow-beating her, he exclaimed, "Why, woman, there's brass enough in your face to make a kettle." "And sauce enough in yours," she instantly rejoined, "to fill it."

Judge V. of this state, has a rich vein of humor running through his ordinarily dignified demeanor, Counsellor H. was arguing before him, recently, a case of domestic infelicity. Said the attorney, "Separating the apartments of my client and this lady was a curtain from ceiling to floor; certainly there was nothing out of the way in that."

"No," replied His Honor; and not much in the way, either."

An Innocent Old Porker. A story is told of a wealthy Wethersfield man who invariably carries a well-stuffed pocketbook around with him, and is blessed with the happy faculty of holding on to what he has got. He never heads a subscription list, though what he might do in this direction will never be known until some man with the requisite pluck can be found to ask him. One day his plethoric calf-skin was missing and with it $1,300 in bank notes. If an electric battery had poured a broadside down the Doctor's spinal column he could scarcely have felt a greater shock. His hands flew from pocket to pocket, and his face lengthened and took on a lugubrious and sorrowful air. Finally he bethought himself of a visit he had made that morning to Bill Wells', on Wolcott Hill, where he went to look at a sow of large size.

The Doctor reasoned that his lost pocketbook was in the pen against which he leaned. He assumed that it would be an easy matter for it to drop out of his pocket with his body thrown forward in the manner he remembered it had been. It was think and go with him. He clambered into his old lumber-box wagon and headed his untamed Bucephalus towards Bill Wells'.

On reaching his destination he rushed to the pen expecting to see the wreck of his pocket-book scattered around the pen. But he was disappointed. Not a sign was there. "Great guns," the Doctor exclaimed, "the old sow has swallowed it whole."

Then Mr. Wells appeared on the scene, and in a moment the excited Doctor cried out; "What'll you take for that sow, I say?"

"I don't know as I want to sell it," replied Mr. Wells, who evidently didn't understand the situation.

"You must sell it. Set your own price, but I must have that sow," pleadingly urged the old farmer.

"Well, then, say $75," and Wells' eyes twinkled merrily as he named it, supposing the price would cool the Doctor's ardor. And he was astonished at the reply:

"I'll take it. Now kill that hog," was the prompt reply.

Mr. Wells now knew he was crazy, and again tried to curb his excitement. But this was only added fuel to the flames.

"Kill that hog, I say," again thundered the Doctor. "She'll digest it if you don't."

"Oh, come, get into your wagon and ride home with me," soothingly suggested Wells.

"Bill Wells, do you think I am crazy? I tell you that sow has swallowed my pocket-book, with $1,300 in it, and if you don't hurry up and have her killed she'll digest it and I'll lose every dollar."

Mr. Wells still looked on in silent astonishment.

"My friend, will you kill that hog?" and he ramm'd his hands down in his overcoat pockets with such force that he discovered a hole in one of the pockets, and as he dove deeper down his excitement gave place to feeling of satisfaction. Between the lining and the cloth of his coat he found the lost pocket-book, with its contents undisturbed. Not a dollar had been digested by the innocent old sow. He offered his neighbor Wells a ten-dollar bill not to say anything about it, but the offer was declined with thanks.
