

The Romantic Sequel to a Tragical Story.

The Wilmington, N. C., Star says: Our readers doubtless remember the tragic occurrence at Lumberton, a year or so ago, resulting in the death of Mr. Ed. Hartman, at the hands of Miss Amelia Linkhaw, in the parlor of a hotel in that town, for which deed of revenge she was subsequently tried and acquitted on the plea of temporary insanity. But, according to the Charlotte Observer, the romance of her life does not end here, another and pleasanter incident having recently been added to a career which began in love and ended in tragedy. That paper continues:

During the period of her confinement in the jail at Lumberton, when the only companion she had was her child, which was born after the enactment of the tragedy, she received many letters from sympathetic persons in all parts of the country. Among her correspondents was a man named Little, who is represented as a custom-house officer stationed at Sullivan's Island, near Charleston. He became deeply interested in her and wrote to her repeatedly while she was in prison.

On the night the trial was expected to close, he was on the Island, and is attempting to reach Charleston during the prevalence of a severe storm, that he might hear at the earliest possible moment whether she was to live or die, he barely escaped being lost by the capsizing of the boat. After the acquittal of Miss Linkhaw the correspondence was kept up, photographs were exchanged, and a proposal of marriage was made and accepted.

A week ago Miss Linkhaw, accompanied by her child and one of her sisters, left Lumberton and proceeded to Florence, S. C., where she was met by Mr. Little and the marriage ceremony was quietly performed. The three—mother, child and husband—then left for Mr. Little's home, and here the story, for the present, stops.

A Church Row.

PITTSBURG, March 29.—Hostilities were renewed this morning between the two factions of the First Reformed church of this city. The anti-Woodside faction, under orders from the presbytery, called a congregational meeting for the election of trustees and other officers. The Woodside faction attended in force and a row ensued.

The mayor and police were summoned and succeeded in restoring order before any serious damage was done. The anti-Woodside faction finally withdrew and held an election at the office of their attorney. The Woodside faction organized a meeting and also held an election. The troubles in the congregation have existed for some months and are so complicated that it is impossible for outsiders to understand the situation. The Synod, which meets in May next, will be called upon to decide between the factions.

Was It Retribution.

Gordon Truesdale, who, with his wife and family of four small girls resided near South Bend, has just come to a frightful end. He was an amateur phrenologist and had a passion for collecting skulls. Some months ago, as he confessed on his death-bed, he went to the grave of Sarah Platts, cut and tore the head from the body and carried it off. A short time ago a swelling appeared on his nose and soon spread all over his face and head. Medical assistance was called and pronounced the case one of blood poisoning. His head soon became a mass of corruption and he died in great agony. His remains were so offensive that they could not be prepared for burial, but were lifted into his coffin in a sheet, and the house cannot yet be occupied so bad is the odor pervading it.

How They Hugged a Pair of Wasps.

A Cheyenne man will bet on anything. Two of 'em put up five dollars apiece on a wager that one could hold a wasp in his hand longer than the other could, and one fellow who rubbed chloroform on his hand expected to win, but the other fellow happened to know that the male wasps don't sting, and got one of that sex, and they grabbed their wasps and sat and smiled at each other while the crowd wondered, until the chloroform had evaporated, and the fellow who used it suddenly let go his wasp and let the audience into the secret of how to swear the shingles off the roof.

Says the Fulton Democrat: "Our correspondent who sent us the marriage notice of the party married at Broad Top City, on the 7th inst., says it was 'a short and quick courtship,' the young gent having made his first call on the lady whom he married, on the afternoon of the same day on which the ceremony, which took place in the evening, was performed. We trust it was not a case of marrying in haste, to be repented of at leisure." The names of the contracting parties were, Silas Benson and Rebecca McNeal.

Profit, $1,000.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it, for their benefit." 14 2t
