

A Singular Case.

Capt. A. C. Pang, living in the Dabling House, West and Chambers street New York, on Sunday evening rushed into the police headquarters of that city, and informed Capt. Silbert that Annie, his thirteen-year-old daughter had disappeared.—He said that Annie and her younger brother and sister were walking along West street about five o'clock on that afternoon when they were met by a short, thick-set man, with black whiskers slightly tinged with gray, and about forty-five years old.—Taking Annie by the hand he persuaded her to accompany him. He led her on board the steamer Bristol, on the Fall River line. Her brother and sister followed. The stranger gave them pennies and put them ashore, but would not allow Annie to land. The steamer sailed, and the two younger children were left crying on the dock. After hearing this statement, Capt. Silbert at once telegraphed to the Chief of Police of Fall River, requesting him to look out for the parties upon the arrival of the boat. When the Bristol reached her dock in the Massachusetts town, yesterday morning, a detective was on hand, and succeeded in arresting the man, who had the little girl with him. They were at once taken to headquarters and a telegram was sent to Superintendent Walling, of New York, notifying him of the arrest. Last evening Capt. Pang and a New York officer left on the five o'clock boat for Fall River, and will arrive there about eight o'clock this morning. It was ascertained that the man arrested for the abduction is Stephen M. Barbour, of No. 237 North 10th street, Philadelphia. Last evening a reporter called at his residence and saw his wife and daughter. They had no knowledge of the circumstances, but stated that Mr. Barbour had left on Saturday on his vacation. It was his intention they said to go to Boston by the Fall River route. They were of course greatly affected when they informed of the sad affair, and as Mrs. Barbour had some doubt as to whether or not it was her husband, she telegraphed at once to the chief of police of Fall River.—Several hours after she received a reply stating that the man in custody was her husband. Mr. Barbour is well known in this city, having lived here nearly all his life. For a number of years he was engaged in the clothing business on Arch and Ninth streets, where he had two large stores. He sold both out, and is now engaged as a salesman for Wanamaker & Brown, at Sixth and Market streets. He is said to be in fair circumstances. Several of his children are grown. It is probable that he will be held at Fall River to await a requisition, when he will be sent to New York city for trial, if the facts of the case warrant, such a proceeding.—Phila. Press.

How Thirteen Girls Were Dosed.

The Detroit Evening "News" says: A large number of girls are employed at Parke, Davis & Co.'s laboratory, foot of McDougall avenue, and some of the medicines and elixirs which go through their hands contain a liberal percentage of wine. The firm prides itself on the quality of its goods and when they made a discovery the other day, that a lot of medicine was below standard, an investigation was promptly set on foot and resulted in a suspicion that some of the girls were drinking the wine and diluting the medicine.

The firm put their heads together and devised a trap for those naughty girls which worked like a charm. The wine used for the next batch of elixirs was "doctored" with a liberal quantity of jalap or ipecac, or some other lively emetic, and after the girls had been at work a little while, thirteen of them turned pale around the gills and declared that they were sick—in fact very sick—and it didn't cause them to feel any better when they learned the trap that had been set for them, and were informed that the firm could get along without their service.

Got His Hay Dried.

Many years ago there lived in Salem, Conn., an eccentric man named Amasa Kilborn, about whom numberless stories are told to this day. On one occasion in summer he had a five acre lot of choice grass cut and spread out to dry. In the afternoon a shower came up and drenched it. The next day the hay was spread out again to dry. Another shower came up and re-drenched it. On the third day the same programme was repeated. On the fourth day, after the hay had been properly dried and raked into windrows, a cloud pillar moved up over the western horizon, and a distant growl of thunder echoed from the hills. Kilborn was mad. He looked at the hay and looked at the cloud. "Run up to the house, boy," he said in a voice trembling with resentment, "and bring down a fire-brand; quick, now!" The boy asked no questions. He came back with a blazing torch, and Kilborn touched off each windrow. "There," said he, "I'll see if this hay will get wet again!"

A Bride Locked up by Her Parents.

Queer folks at Owosso. A rich man's daughter went to Monroe on a visit. There she was joined by a young man who was in her father's employ, and they were married. On their return the marriage certificate was shown. So was the old man's boot. The young woman, who by the way is old enough to defy the whole family if she cares to, is shut up at home, and the young man is about town receiving the sympathy and congratulations of all his friends. He is said to be a worthy individual, but his bride's parents don't appear to think so.

A Very Narrow Gauge R. R.

One of the most curious railroads in the world is the ten-inch gauge road running from North Bellerica, to New Bedford. It was at first hooted at by the people, but the road was completed, making a length of about eight and a half miles. There are eleven bridges on the road, one of which is over 100 feet long. The rails weigh twenty-five pounds to the yard. The road is well built and equipped. One grade is 155 feet. The cars and engines will, at first sight, create wonder and admiration. Their perfect proportions give them a handsome appearance. They are constructed very near the ground, giving them great advantages for safety. The cars have an aisle with one seat on each side in the same manner as an ordinary car has two seats. The length of the cars allows thirty seats, each person having a seat to himself. The cars are supplied with closets, water-tanks, are heated by steam and have all the modern improvements. They weigh but four and a half tons, ordinary cars weighing, on an average, eighteen tons. The trains run at the rate of twenty miles an hour with perfect safety. The engine is placed behind the tender, giving it greater adhesion to the track. They weigh eight tons, and draw two passenger and two freight cars. The cost of the road was about 4,500 per mile.
