83" Mr. Smith," said a lady at a fair, "wont you please buy this bouquet to present to the lady you love?" "Twouldn't be right," said Mr. Smith; "I'm a married man."

637 As they were about to haug an Irishman in London, one of his friends who had come to witness the ceremony, eried: "I always told you you would come to this!" "And you always lied! I have not come-I was brought!"

He was old and wealthy, she was young and pretty. The proposal was slightly different from what we generally hear. "Miss Cora, I am very old, you are very young; will you do me the honor to become my widow?"

A new doctrine should be fitted to the mind as women fit dresses. Baste it loosely, try it on carefully, examine it thoroughly, take it in here and let it out there, and finally, when it is just right, sew it together with a strong thread.

He appeared to be almost gone.-Rolling his eyes toward the partner of his bosom he gasped, "Bury me 'neath the weeping willow, and plant a single white rose over my head." "Oh, It's no use," she snapped out, "Your nose would scorch the roots!" He got well.

Artemus Ward once told us that the funniest story he ever heard was about an inebriated reporter, who leaned over the railing of the reporter's gallery in the English House of Lords and inquired: "Will shum noble 'ord plea' shing a comic shong."

For many years, Moses, a negro, was a servant at the University of Alabama, and waited on the students very faithfully; but he was a most notorious bypocrite. He was on that account commonly called "Preach" among the boys. One day he was passing a crowd of students, when one of them out of mischief, called to him and said : " I say, Preach, what are you going to do when Satan gets you?" "Wait on students," was the ready reply.

Correct Logic. He was lying in front of the store door when the merchant came out, and stirring him up with the toe of his boot, said: "Are you drunk ?"

"You bet,"

"Then you move off from here." "Are you drunk?" queried the inebriate. "No; I am sober," was the indignant

"Then you can move off from here a d-d sight easier than I can."

There are two sisters in Louisville famous for their wit, and there is also in that town a gentleman, Colonel "Blank" who for nearly two generations has had the reputation of having courted every heiress in the neighborhood. One of the sisters referred to said to the other several weeks ago: "If a million dollars was left to you, what is the first thing you would do?"

the Lord to keep me out of Colonel "Blank's clutches." This was reported to the Colonel, who waited for revenge. The other day the railing of the plazza at Crab Orchard, saw the Colonel in the yard below. "Well, dear me, Colonel," she said, "I meet you everywhere I go. Can't I go anywhere without seeing you?"

witty young woman, leaning on the

"Yes, there is one place," calmly replied the Colonel. "Where is it? let me go ?" "Well, go home."

That Boy.

His juvenile heart yearned for a kite string. He had a kite and also an ugly disreputable looking dog. Accompanied by this beast, he went into a drug store and planking down a penny, asked for it's equivalent in licorice. While the drug clerk's back was turned, the wicked small boy tied to his dog's tall the end of the ball of cord which is in a case on every orthodox retail store counter. Then he gave his dog a harsh kick and yelled at him to go home. The dog went, and in his best time. He had got off with about enough string to fly a respectable kite when the drug clerk had put up the licorice. The boy cut the string the end of what he had was out of the store in a "Jiffy." And as that small boy lelsurely sauntered out of that store smearing his mouth with that licorice, the absent-minded drug clerk thought he never had seen a boy take so little interest in things in general.
