Wanted A Cheap Turkey.

A Tenth street grocer was standing behind the counter in his store one day, when in came a stranger with a huge basket on his arm.

"Well my friend what can I do for you ?" asked the grocer coming forward.

"I vant a cheap doorkey;" said the stranger, casting his eyes over the display of poultry; 'a Christmas doorkey.'

"A doorkey! A turkey, is that what you mean?" "Yah, dot was it," said the dutchman smiling blandly; "a doorkey. Done I say dot? How you sold them?" "Two dollars a piece."

"Two tollars ablece! Gott in Himmel ! Do you dinks I vas a Roachchild ? Two tollar for a skeeny leetle doorkey! You saw some grass in mein aye, hey ?"

"That's the price." "Sthop a meenit, mien friendt! Dere vas nodding schmall about dis rooster, aber my vife she say to me dis morning, "Yaweup," she say, "of you bay more as a tollar for dot doorkey, look oud for sgwalls," and she mean it, py gracious!

inquired. "No." "Conseeder! Conseeder! von dot fell mit himself down and broke his neck ?" he suggested. "Done you got vone dot died mit de rhxmatics, or de apischnotics or de schmall-pox? Was none of dose doorkeys sthruck by lidening? Py shiminy, done you got a second Teo Much For The Lawyer. Billy Brown was a sharp-witted son of Ireland, full of good humor and repartee. Billy was once summoned as a witness in a case at a London assize against his employer. He entered the witness box in his ordinary costume, very dirty and rather ragged. The op-posing counsel thought to confuse the witness by poking fun at his shabby appearance. He asked Billy if those clothes were his best. "Ah, sure sir, they're not !" "Oh, then, you have better clothes, which you wear on sundays, perhaps ?"

"It's moughty thrue, sir." "A white vest, grey coat, knee breeches, and a glossy castor, eh ?" "Ah you've met me somewhere!"

eried Billy. "No, I have not;" replied the counsel "but since you confess that you have good clothes, are you not ashamed to appear in court in that disgraceful state ?" "Not a bit of it," said Billy, pointing to the judge; "sure his lordship's in his working dress, and I'm in mine."

"I never saw such tenderness in my life. Whenever Dr. Smith comes home his wife meets him at the door and kisses him." "Tenderness in a horn !" responded a friend of the family; "she does that to see how his temperance pledge is coming on this cold weather. Whenever she kisses him it smacks of hypocrisy."?

13 One of Hartford's popular dry goods merchants was asked the other day how he spent his evenings. His reply was: "At night I store my mind, and during the day I mind my store." He was alive at last accounts. "Is there an opening here for an intellectual writer?" asked a seedy red-nosed individual to an editor. "Yes my friend," replied the man of quills; "a considerate carpenter, foreseeing your visit, left an opening for you; turn the knob to the right!" How She Saved Money.

"For nearly six years my daughter was most of the time on a sick bed from kidney and other disorders peculiar to women. We had used up our savings on doctors and prescriptions without any benefit. Our dominie advised us to try Parker's Ginger Tonic, and four bottles effected a marvelous cure. As it has been our only medicine since, and a dollar's worth has kept our family well over a year, and have been able to lay by a little money again for a rainy day."
