A stock-broker, returning to his office the other day, after a substantial luncheon with a client, said complacently, to his head clerk:

"Mr. Puthin, the world looks different to a man when he has had a bottle of champagne in him."

"Yes, sir," replied the clerk, significantly, "and he looks different to the world."

Bergh is always getting up some thing in the philanthropic line. It is understood that he offers a large cash prize for the best essay in answer to the question:

"How shall we make our out-door life attractive to the mosquito?"

We've got it. Go out doors yourself. Remit by the registered letter, post-office order, or draft on New Bloomfield.

If you have warts on your hand, rub each of them with a bullet, and load a gun with the bullets. Then watch until a vagrant cow tries to open the front gate of your yard with her horns. Aim carefully at the cow's head, and fire. If all the bullets go into her head, it may not cure the warts; but it will be an almighty good thing for the neighborhood.

To say that Jones' nose is a rouser would be stating it mildly. It stands out on his profile like a good deed in a naughty world, or a lighthouse on a beach. And Jones is sensitive about that nose. Seeing a strange young man gazing at him the other day, Jones became uneasy, until he finally broke out with,

"Well, what are you staring at? Do you see anything remarkable about me?"

"Nose, sir," was the rather equivocal reply of the young man as he dodged around the corner.—Boston Transcript.

Meant a Raw One.

A French peasant saw in the river a floating egg. He thought he could catch it with his hand, but in his attempt he fell in the water, and the egg escaped him. The water was deep and he could not swim. In terror he believed that God was thus punishing him for his greediness. To propitiate his fate he vowed that if he escaped he would never eat another egg. Instantly a branch of a tree presented itself to him, by means of which he gained the banks of the stream. Shaking himself he said: "I suppose, O Lord, that you of course understood me to say raw egg."

A fine haired young lady of Wheeling went away from home some time ago on a visit to a friend. She was a finicky sort of a girl and was very proper indeed. At dinner on the day of her arrival she ate very little.

"Why, Jane," said her friend, "you don't eat anything. Take something else; please do!"

"Oh, no," she simpered, "thank you; I never eat big messes away from home."

The was a silence during the rest of the meal.

One day Judge Dudley Marvin, who was a famous lawyer for more than a quarter of a century, was accosted by a man, who said:

"I have a boy whom I want you to take and make a lawyer of."

"How old is he?" asked Mr. Marvin.

"He is eighteen years old, stout and rugged; and he's got a pair of lungs like a bellows," replied the father.

"Has he any other qualifications?"

"Yes, sir, he's got the great qualification of all," said his father; "he's the confoundest liar you ever saw. I thought when I heard you in the courtroom just now, that it wouldn't take very long for Sam to come pretty nigh up to you."

A Fish Story.

Some Eastern tourist had been spinning some incredible yarns, when one of the party turning to an old mountaineer, said:

"Bill, that get's away with fishing in Montana, don't it?"

"Wall, I don't know 'bout that."

"Do you mean to say that you have caught larger fish?"

"No, but I've caught some purty big fellers."

"Come, now, tell us the weight of the largest trout you ever caught."

"Wall, I can't exactly tell as to the weight, but you folks can figger on it.—Now, you know it is over two hundred miles around the Yellowstone Lake.—Put that down. As I said before, I don't know the weight of the biggest trout I ever yanked out, but I did haul up one on the beach, and after I landed him the lake fell three feet, and it hasn't riz since."
